Vandenberg Calls Tariff Bill Blind Speculation

Harrison Sees Senate Committee Approval Within Week.

G.O.P. Group Makes Vigorous Attack

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As the Republicans sharply and roughly assailed President Roosevelt's reciprocal tariff bargaining bill, Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, in charge of the measure, predicted it would be approved without substantial change before next week ends.

Most Republicans privately concede this and admit that the speeches they are making and the amendments they are proposing are for the purpose of establishing a record in order to get as much political capital out of this issue as they can if the tariff bargaining scheme fails.

The day was given over to hearing the opposition to the bill and when adjournment was taken until Monday not a voice had been raised in defense of the measure. But this was only because the Democrats have decided to let the Republicans talk themselves out and not contribute to delaying a vote. Some time next week Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson will undertake to answer some of the questions raised by the Republicans.

Wants Finish in Week.

Meanwhile Robinson is anxious to have those with prepared speeches of oppostion finish them. He is determined to dispose of the tariff bill before next week ends and, if necessary, to accomplish this end, he proposes to start sessions at 10 a. m. and continue them until 11 p. m.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, led the Republicans in their attack. His speech was regarded as the most vigorous and important of the day. He was followed in succession by Senators James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania; Jesse Metcalf, of Rhode Island; Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, all Republicans. Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, has been the only Democrat to assail the bill.

Vandenberg contended the bill demanded a delegation of Congressional taxing power and Senate treaty-making power which, he added, "is without color of constitutionality." Moreover he held the bill would make President Roosevelt an absolute dictator over industry, giving him "unchecked authority to rule or ruin industrial and agricultural commodities, the citizens and communities dependent on them for existence."

"Occur Without Recourse."

"This fate will occur without recourse and with only a superficial right of hearing which amounts to little more than assurance that each affected industry will be on hand for its own funeral," he said.

Contending that "we shall get the worst of these tariff trades," Vandenberg pointed out that this country has signed "most favored nation" treaties with 29 governments, "to all of whom we must grant any tariff favors granted to any one of them. Thus he held, "we must multiply our tariff gifts

Another Seized In Robles Case

Girl Fails to Identify "Most Promising" Suspect.

Tucson, Ariz., May 18 (AP).—Two unidentified suspects in the kidnaping of June Robles were detained by authorities for further questioning today, despite failure of the 6-year-old girl to identify either.

One of the men, taken into custody this morning, had been sought since June was found last Monday entombed in a sheet-iron box buried in the desert. Officers described him as the "most promising" suspect they had rounded up. The girl studied his face calmly, but was unable to recognize ever having seen him or heard his voice.

The other man, who had been questioned and released yesterday when June could not establish his identity, was brought in again for further examination.

Officers said they would continue examining the man confronted this morning by the girl, in an effort to check up on circumstantial evidence indicating he might have participated in the case without ever having been seen by the victim.

Bank Bandits Believed Led By Dillinger

Woman in Gang Which Makes $30,000 Haul in Michigan.

Flint, Mich., May 18 (AP).—A scar-faced machine-gunner led a raid on a branch bank here today and, although it was doubtful if the Nation's No. 1 "bad man" himself was a participant, police suspected that John Dillinger's gang had replenished its war chest with $30,000 more of bank money.

It was a typical Dillinger foray, carefully timed to follow the delivery of $100,000 by armored car from the home office of the Citizens Commercial & Savings Bank, but a multiplicity of identifications cast increasing doubt upon the actual presence of the notorious fugitive.

Kirk Roland, a customer, first declared that it was Dillinger, scar and all, who prodded him with a machine gun and threatened to "blow your brains out" at the first overt act. By nightfall, however, four other members of the robber gang had been identified by various witnesses, from photographs, as the elusive desperado.

The only member not so identified was a woman who sat in an automobile with a machine gun in her lap while the robbery was in progress.

The robbers waited outside the Glenwood avenue branch bank until an armored car had been driven away, after the delivery of $100,000 in currency. A man with a sawed-off shotgun and a woman sat in one car. Four men waited in another car.

Then three of the men entered the bank. The machine gunner, noticing a pistol in Roland's pocket, forced him to lie on the floor and kept one foot on him while covering five other patrons and four employes with his weapon. A second man, brandishing two pistols, ran around the lobby "like a mad man," some of the witnesses said, while the third man vaulted the steel screen into the tellers' cages.

Only $30,000 of the money just delivered had reached the cages; the rest still was in the vault. The robbers, apparently knowing approximately the amount that should have been on hand, demanded more money but finally left without it.

Harry Stamman, branch manager, stepped on a robbery alarm as the men entered, but before the police could cover the 2 miles from downtown the robbers had fled.

With mystifying rapidity they dropped from sight. Some witnesses said they took Highway M-21 out of the city, toward Grand Rapids. Others said they circled back toward the downtown section. A quickly organized pursuit by State police, local police and sheriff's officers was fruitless.

Colombia, Peru End Land Dispute

Agreement Averts War Over Leticia Corridor.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, May 18 (U.P.).—Colombia and Peru tonight ended a territorial quarrel which almost led them to war.

The two governments agreed on an accord settling their dispute over the isolated Leticia corridor in the upper Amazon River region.

Agreement climaxed months of discussions between Colombian and Peruvian delegations under Brazilian auspices while the disputed territory was under control of a League of Nations Commission.

6 New Crime Laws Signed By President

Broadens U. S. Program to Curb Evil - Doer, He Declares.

Six new Federal crime laws went into effect yesterday when President Roosevelt signed bills giving the Department of Justice powerful weapons for suppressing gangster activities.

"These laws," the President said in signing the bills, "are a renewed challenge on the part of the Federal Government to interstate crime. They are complementary to the broader program designed to curb the evildoer of whatever class."

Warning that laws alone are not enough, the President said:

"Law enforcement and gangster extermination can not be made completely effective so long as a substantial part of the public looks with tolerance upon known criminals, permits public officers to be corrupted or intimidated by them or applauds efforts to romanticize crime.

"Federal men are constantly facing machine gun fire in the pursuit of gangsters. I ask citizens, individually and as organized groups, to recognize the facts and meet them with courage and determination. I stand squarely behind the efforts of the Department of Justice to bring to book every law-breaker, big and little.

"There will be no relenting."

Henceforth Federal agents can combat crime in fields hitherto reserved to State authorities. It is now a Federal offense to:

Assault a Federal agent while on duty.

Incite or participate in a riot or escape at a Federal penal institution.

Rob any member bank of the Federal Reserve System or the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The sixth law permits death sentences for kidnapers who have not returned their victims unharmed.

With the new laws tucked under his arm, Attorney General Cummings smiled and said:

"These laws close many loopholes through which criminals have evaded Federal capture and punishment. They come at a crucial moment. Kidnapers, killers and racketeers are a serious menace to life and property as well as to the supremacy of the law."

Wilmot Fined $25 In Smith Assault

Capitol Police Lieutenant Loses Court Fight.

Lieut. Alfred Wilmot of the Capitol Police was fined $25 by Judge Ralph Given in Police Court yesterday on a charge of assaulting George Smith, 23, of the 100 block of C street northeast, March 18.

Wilmot was convicted of the assault charge two weeks ago and came up yesterday for sentence. His attorney pleaded that the case involved only simple assault, as no actual blows were struck. The Judge remarked that he had "no alternative" as Wilmot had been found guilty and he should be fined as a "lesson."

Young Smith swore out a warrant for Wilmot's arrest after the latter's acquittal on a charge of assaulting Smith's mother, Mrs. Elsie Jardine. Both charges grew out of the same altercation.

Pay Raises Are Banned By Builders

D. C. Contractors Join to Fight Unions After Plasterers Quit.

Paralysis of All Federal Construction Seen if Labor Persists.

Building construction in the Capital continued its march yesterday toward complete paralysis when employing sub-contractors representing virtually every trade took a united stand against demands for a six-hour day and wage increases to union workmen.

Companies employing plasterers, carpenters, bricklayers and a dozen other crafts assembled late in the day, following the walkout of plasterers, and decided they will not yield to strikers or any trades threatening strikes to enforce demands for shorter hours and more money.

The meeting, held at 2539 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was called by the Master Builders Association, which is still deadlocked with union carpenters who struck May 1 for $1.37½ an hour on a 30-hour week basis. It was the consensus of those present that if one or two more trades join the plasterers' and carpenters' walkout, a total shutdown on all Federal construction here and all private building being done with union labor will result.

100 Plasterers Out.

Approximately 100 employed plasterers began their strike yesterday, as they had threatened, following refusal by the Employing Plasterers Association to give them an 25-cent increase to $1.75 an hour and a 30-hour week. Most of them were engaged on the Supreme Court, Justice, city postoffice addition and Labor-I. C. C. buildings.

On one job, the much delayed Labor-Interstate Commerce Commission Buildings, a strike within a strike was in progress. It is a jurisdictional dispute, one of many which have thrown these interconnected buildings months behind schedule, involving two rival international unions.

It first arose about six months ago when workmen affiliated with the Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers Association, who were casting acoustical stone to be set in the connecting auditorium, claimed that 50 per cent of the setting should go to members of their own organization. At the time all this work was being done by marble setters, affiliated with the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union.

Strike, Return, Strike.

Marble setters refused to give in and the O. P. C. F. A. plasterers who were casting the stone struck. That was a couple of months ago. They returned to work, expecting the dispute would be arbitrated, but neither international union has taken any action. So Wednesday they struck again, two days ahead of their brother plasterers, concerned only with getting a wage increase and shorter hours.

Thursday, casting plasterers affiliated with B. M. P. U., the rival international, were set to work casting the stone so work could proceed. Their local is in the same organization as the marble setters, so that this particular job will not be held up while the strike is in progress.

Work was proceeding normally on the stone casting and setting yesterday, said E. A. Burnap, construction superintendent, although elsewhere in the $10,000,000 twin buildings progress is seriously handicapped by the absence of carpenters and plasterers.

To date the only part which the Government has played in attempting to avert a universal tie-up in Washington is to call upon the Labor Department's conciliation service to intercede. Its efforts have been futile, carpenters positively refusing to compromise and plasterers taking a position almost as rigid.

London Bids For U.S. Aid In Far East

Britain Will Not Act Without America, Says Simon.

War Risk in Economic Pressure Too Great, Commons Told.

London, May 18 (AP).—Emphasizing the war peril behind economic pressure, Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, made it clear today that Great Britain will take no action against any treaty violator without the full cooperation of the United States.

Armed forces will not be sent to the Far East to "preserve" China's integrity, Sir John declared in a vigorous defense of the cabinet's foreign policy, after it was charged in the House of Commons that Japan is "pushing her imperialistic expansion into North China for the purpose of creating Manchukuo Number Two."

"Economic sanctions (pressure against a treaty violator) can not be applied without the risk of war," said the foreign secretary, "and we can not undertake any system of sanctions or effective action unless the United States cooperates."

However, he declared, Britain intends to fulfill her obligations under existing treaties to "respect" China's rights.

Japan's Word Given.

As to Japan's intentions, Great Britain has that nation's "solmen word" she will respect China's boundaries, Sir John asserted.

Simon's declarations were variously interpreted in foreign quarters here. Some believed he is bidding for closer Anglo-American cooperation in world affairs, by seeking to force the United States into a new policy on European and Far Eastern questions.

The view of other observers was that he hopes to influence Japan to change her China policy by friendliness rather than by harsh tactics.

"Great Britain has never signed any treaty to preserve the territorial integrity of China," Simon declared emphatically, denying there is any obligation to "use the army, navy or air force" for that purpose.

Being adjournment day for the House of Commons, the opposition, led off by Sir Stafford Cripps, former Laborite minister, took occasion to lambast the national government's foreign policy as one of "vacillation and weakness."

"Japan is converting Manchuria and Jehol into a vast military base," Sir Stafford charged as he set forth crisply his charges against Tokyo.

Promises Assailed.

The promises of Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota to respect China's integrity, he declared, can not be believed. He intimated that Germany, Japan and Turkey might form an alliance, charging that Japan and Germany have taken the same line of action in "flouting" the League of Nations.

"The entire question of disarmament," he said, "is bound up in the China situation. If that nation can not be sure of security, none can. Britain must willingly participate openly and actively in an international program to guarantee the security of nations."

Simon rejected flatly Cripp's interpretation of the obligations of Britain and, while he indicated his government is willing to participate in an international policy of sanctions, in specific cases, he emphasized the importance of American cooperation.

"I hereby gratefully and publicly recognize" the aid the United States has given to the League of Nations, Sir John said, but reminded the House that it "must understand the limitations under which the United States is likely to act."

French apple importers and wine exporters joined forces in a good-will scheme which calls for people in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle to drink "on France," in the hope that a trade can be arranged whereby apples will be swapped for wine.

Roosevelt Asks Arms Embargo to Put End To War in Gran Chaco

Litvinoff at Geneva; Arms Pact Hinted

Geneva, May 18 (AP).—Signs of a new attitude on the part of Russia, which might bring about a European pact that would serve as a preliminary to an armament agreement, were seen by League of Nations circles today as the result of a visit here of Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs.

Litvinoff, arriving unexpectedly, conferred with Louis Barthou, French foreign minister. There were widespread reports he discussed the possibility of a mutual assistance agreement which would affect only the Russian European frontier.

Under such an agreement Russia would assume sole responsibility for protection of her Siberian frontier, and other parties to the agreement would not be obligated to render assistance in case of a conflict there.

The Soviet government is known to have insisted heretofore that any military assistance pact must apply to all of Russia, and France has declined to accept responsibilities for military help in the Far East.

U. S. Treasury Buying Silver, N. Y. Reports

New York, May 18 (AP).—The Federal Treasury has been accumulating silver in the bullion market and has purchased at least 35,000,000 ounces since May 1, it was reported in Wall street circles today.

Estimates of silver acquired by the Treasury go as high as 60,000,000 ounces. It was thought that between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 ounces would be conservative.

Metal has been bought through Treasury agents here in anticipation of silver legislation by Congress, it was said.

"Mysterious" buying has been noted in the market on numerous occasions. All orders have been for spot delivery, or delivery in the near future.

Bought Below 50 Cents.

The metal has been purchased at levels well below 50 cents an ounce, mentioned in dispatches from Washington as the possible level for future Government acquisitions.

Some of the silver was said to have been acquired with proceeds of Treasury gold sold abroad for British pounds, which were then converted into dollars.

There has been some coincidence, however, between buying of silver in New York and offerings of sterling thought to be for Treasury account.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York is the Treasury's fiscal agent, and the Reserve Bank, in turn, undertakes some of its operations through one or two commercial banks.

Switch to London Market.

Meanwhile, many private owners of silver bought for speculative purposes were reported to have disposed of New York holdings in favor of buying silver in London. Fear of being taxed out of profits in the event of silver legislation was said to be the motivating reason.

As a result of this private selling, the Treasury would have been able to get metal without causing much rise in quotations. Purchase of silver in London by Americans recently has pushed the London price above the New York quotation, an unusual situation since silver became the object of speculation here.

Grau Collapses Greeting 100,000

Riotous Welcome Given Former Cuban Ruler.

Havana, May 18 (AP).—Former President Ramon Grau San Martin, who today found handling a crowd of admirers more trying than standing off hordes of enemies, rested at his residence here tonight after fainting in the midst of a homecoming reception.

Doctors said his collapse was due to sheer exhaustion. His car had to press through the packed ranks of 100,000 well-wishers to get him to his sea-front home upon his return from self-imposed exile in Mexico. The drive of only three miles had taken him 90 minutes.

Later he received a small group of associates. They reported his condition not serious, but that he must be allowed complete rest during the night.

Wheeler Asks FTC Probe of Farm Market

(Associated Press.)

A far-reaching Federal Trade Commission investigation of industries handling farm commodities was proposed in the Senate yesterday by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana.

Earlier, the Senate Agriculture Committee had virtually agreed to report amendments to the agricultural adjustment act, which would strengthen Secretary Wallace's power to license those handling the farmers' products.

President Roosevelt made it known today that he is hopeful the changes will be approved this session.

Wheeler's resolution was referred to the Agriculture Committee. The Montanan said he saw no reason why it should not be approved, since "it seeks to get at the facts."

He introduced his proposal for an inquiry following charges recently by Secretary Wallace that there had been an organized attempt by manufacturers and other processors of agricultural commodities to block enactment of amendments to the farm act.

Author Reticent.

Wheeler declined to say whether he had conferred with Wallace or other farm officials before offering his resolutions, which recited that farmers' incomes had been steadily declining, "while the earnings and profits of concerns processing or dealing in certain lines of farm products have increased or declined only moderately."

The resolution said that it had been charged that "monopolistic, oppressive and unfair methods and practices of various middlemen, processors, packers and handlers are in whole and part" responsible for the plight of the grower.

Wheeler's resolution also recited that it had been charged that some of the industries involved had escaped the payment of income taxes through high salaries and other devices.

Would Probe Finances.

His resolution would authorize the Trade Commission to investigate the financial position of the principal corporations engaged in "manufacturing, processing, distribution and marketing of principal" farm products. It would empower an inquiry into their capitalization, profits, salaries paid officers, in-

League Votes to Wipe Liberia From Its Slate

Geneva, May 18 (AP).—The League of Nations administered a sharp rebuke to Liberia today as the council voted to cut off all financial and economic assistance.

The future position of the country, once a refuge for former slaves and now accused of mistreating native Africans, was in doubt, as the Liberian representative asked time to take the necessary action to avoid expulsion from the League.

Message Asks Senate to Approve Pact on Munitions.

Emphasizes Peril In Armament Race

Britain Waits Action of President on Unrest in Far East.

Developments yesterday in a war-frightened world included:

Washington — President Roosevelt asked the Senate to approve the general arms and ammunition convention to control traffic in munitions and to prevent war. It was believed the United States would act with European and South American nations to stop the long struggle between Paraguay and Bolivia.

London—Sir John Simon indicated Britain awaits United States' move in any concerted action to check Japan's expansionist policy in China.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The Administration yesterday gave answer, by two quick, decisive moves, to intimations from Geneva that this Government is not doing its full part in international efforts to curb the jungle warfare raging in the Gran Chaco.

Acting a few hours after a message by President Roosevelt, Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, introduced a resolution which would empower the President to halt the sale of munitions to Bolivia and Paraguay.

In his message to the Senate, the President asked prompt ratification of the arms traffic convention of 1925, declaring that unrestricted shipments of armaments have become "a serious source of international discord and strife."

Embargo Proposed.

Since this treaty does not in itself authorize an embargo, the State Department sent to Capitol Hill the resolution that would enable President Roosevelt to align this Government with other nations in what loomed as an international movement to stop the shipment of munitions to the Chaco.

This was discerned in dispatches from Geneva, which declared that a legal formula by which the League of Nations might undertake a general embargo had been worked out over the protests of both the representatives of Bolivia and Paraguay. The plan was first broached Thursday by Capt. Anthony Eden, British delegate.

The Pittman resolution authorizes President Roosevelt, if he finds the prohibition of the sale of munitions "may contribute to the re-establishment of peace between these countries," proclaim it unlawful to sell munitions "to any person, company or association acting in the interest of either country."

The resolution, which was refer-

Zook Quits U.S. Education Post

Studebaker, Des Moines School Superintendent, His Successor.

Studebaker will not assume his new duties until September 1.

Studebaker since 1920 has been superintendent of schools at Des Moines. He has placed practices in effect there which, according to Ickes, have become standard in many other public school systems.

Studebaker was born in McGregor, Iowa, in 1887. He received his B. S. degree from Leander Clark College in 1917, and his A. M. from Columbia in 1920. He is married.

Dr. Zook is a former resident of Akron, Ohio.

Sayre Warns Educators of War Menace

Economic Nationalism Is Breeding Conflict, He Asserts.

Headlong pursuit of economic nationalism is leading the world straight toward another war, Francis Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, told the World Federation of Education Associations yesterday afternoon.

"Greed and selfishness still produce war," Sayre reminded his hearers, "but today it is not scheming potentates but rather entrenched national policies which sweep nations, often against their wills, into war.

"The policy of economic nationalism, born partly of selfish groups seeking under the guise of protection greater commercial profits for their enterprises and partly of sincere factions seeking to find a ready solution for pressing national problems, is sweeping across the world and sowing the seeds from which inevitably will spring the many-headed dragon of international conflict," Sayre warned.

Cites World-Wide Scope.

Sayre has charge of the State Department's negotiations looking toward conclusion of reciprocal tariff agreements to stimulate world trade. He said almost every nation today is struggling to cut down its imports and increase its exports in an effort to avoid economic ruin.

"The utter folly of nations trying to live apart from each other is clear, yet the movement of economic nationalism has now gained such world-wide force as to sweep into its rushing currents practically the whole of the economic life of the world," Sayre said.

Inevitably this spells ever-increasing barriers athwart the channels of world trade and the eventual drying up of all commerce, he said, recalling that world trade today is but a third of what it was in 1929.

"Reduction in world trade means reduction in world production; and reduction in production means inescapably unemployment. Today there are some 30,000,000 unemployed workers in the world.

War Menace Stressed.

"Unless world trade can be revived, unemployment, suffering and demoralization bid fair to be permanent," Sayre warned.

"It is the age-old conflict of self-centered struggle making for the suffering of all versus common efforts for the larger welfare. In the last analysis materialism leads to suffering, and as long as National policies are based upon narrow materialistic ambitions, so long will the peoples of the world face suffering and disaster," the speaker said.

Charging that economic nationalism breeds conflict, he reminded his hearers the world is still faced by the dragon of war.

"In the fairy tales dragons are always killed; unless our dragon is mastered, it will devour our fairest and best. Unless we crush modern warfare out of our civilization, our present civilization will go under. Another war means pretty much the end. It is not too clear whether we shall kill the dragon or the dragon will kill us."

Court Signs Order In Field Litigation

Wife Given 2 Children and Maintenance.

Permanent maintenance of $30 a week, the custody of two minor children, Sara and David, and a home at 3007 Thirty-fourth street northwest, were awarded to Mrs. Janet F. Field, wife of C. Carter Field, in District Supreme Court yesterday, when Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue signed a final decree of maintenance.

The home is to be conveyed to Mrs. Field for life, and upon her death it is to be sold and the proceeds evenly divided between the children. She also is to be given 100 shares of common stock of the Peoples Drug Stores, now standing in Mr. Field's name.

In the decree Justice O'Donoghue also held that all of the household furnishings in the Thirty-fourth street home should be given to Mrs. Field. The decree granted her "permanent" custody of the children. Attorneys Michael F. Keogh and Leonard Block represented Mrs. Field.

Treasury Rejects Furniture Bids

The Treasury Department yesterday rejected bids for $200,000 worth of office equipment with the declaration that prices asked "were far out of line."

Fourteen bids were submitted. All were identical, according to C. J. Peoples, director of the Treasury procurement division. He cited two prices carrying increases ranging as high as 200 per cent, and said they were even higher than 1929 peak prices.

Peoples rejected the bids after an inquiry. He said the Treasury had expected to pay more because of NRA provisions, but that the bids exceeded available appropriations.

High NRA Pay Causes Factory to Plan Move

Kansas City, May 18 (AP).—S. S. Holland, president of the Vulcan Manufacturing Co., builders of washing machines, announced today his company would move to Sandusky, Ohio, in the near future.

He declared it was impossible for the concern, which has been in business here 30 years, to remain in Kansas City and compete with Eastern manufacturers while paying a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour, as provided in the NRA code.

Soviet Violates Treaty Pledge, Woll Charges

Charges that Russia has violated it s pledge not to conduct Communist propaganda activities in the United States were made yesterday by Matthew Woll, acting president of the National Civic Federation. The charges were made in a letter to Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the House committee investigating foreign propaganda.

Woll asked that his organization be permitted to present evidence allegedly showing the following:

"The Communist party of the United States is a section of the Communist Internationale, which is located in Moscow under the immediate control of the Soviet regime.

"The objective and methods to be followed by the American section of the Communist Internationale were dictated by that Internationale at a period subsequent to the pledge given by Maxim M. Litvinoff to the President of the United States as a condition of Soviet recognition.

Would Make Change by Force.

"The objective of the Communist party is the establishment of a Soviet regime in place of the present Government of the United States.

"This change in the form of our Government is not to be affected by constitutional means but by the use of force and violence.

"In order to prepare itself to effect the aforesaid object by the aforesaid means, the Communist party is carrying on active propaganda throughout the United States by means of newspapers, books, pamphlets, movies and 'throw aways;' it organizes meetings, stirs up, aggravates and leads strikes, penetrates trade unions, organizes young workers, educates children in its subversive doctrines in schools of its own establishment and in public schools and colleges, and stimulates unrest among colored persons throughout the country.

Prepares for Sabotage.

"Pending the recruiting of its strength by those tactics, the Communist party of the U. S. A. is engaged in fostering misunderstanding between nations, and is preparing in case of war to commit sabotage in our munition factories and elsewhere in the interests of Soviet Russia.

"All this propaganda and subversive activity is directed, encouraged and aided by the Third International in direct violation of the Litvinoff pledge, and they have increased in volume and intensity markedly since recognition was granted to the Soviet regime by the United States."

Strike of Great Lakes Seamen May End Soon

Buffalo, N. Y., May 18 (AP).—The strike of the crews at six Great Lakes ports may be settled soon, some strike leaders predicted this afternoon.

They denied that a compromise proposal by G. A. Tomlinson, of Cleveland, president of the Great Lakes Towing Co., had been rejected. Leaders of the Buffalo strikers said unions at Cleveland, Conneaut, Erie, Fairport and Ashtabula had indicated a willingness to follow Buffalo's lead.

Macon Hops U .S. In 51 Hours

Dresel Sees Dirigible Aid in Time of War.

Sunnyvale, Calif., May 18 (AP). Belief the dirigible Macon would demonstrate her worth in war time was expressed today by Commander A. H. Dresel, after the ship arrived at its home port here 51 hours after it left Florida.

Commander Dresel was highly pleased with the performance of the Macon on her round-trip to the Caribbean, the longest training flight she has made.

The dirigible fought headwinds in crossing Texas and her commander said she might have made the journey from Miami in 45 hours had she not idled up the Pacific Coast for a daylight mooring. Officers said the Macon had required around 72 hours for her previous Westward trip from Lakehurst.

"Butterfly Man" Dies on Gallows

Lockhart, the paper butterfly and trinket vendor who flashed his tinsel wares before the eyes of Mae Giffin, 15-year-old school girl, lured her from her home by promising employment. He admitted that he criminally attacked the girl, then vexed at her resistance, stabbed her to death.

red to the Foreign Relations Committee, would impose a fine not to exceed $10,000, imprisonment up to two years, or both, for violation of the embargo order. A similar measure will be introduced in the House Monday by Chairman Sam D. McReynolds, of the House Foreign Relations Committee.

After the President's message had been read, Pittman reported out the arms traffic convention together with a favorable resolution by his committee, which, however, conditioned acceptance on the ratification of the treaty by nine other of the major powers involved.

The President's message was concerned almost entirely with the international arms agreement, as forecast Friday in The Post. This treaty, which has lain dormant in the Senate since January 11, 1926, merely provides that munitions may be shipped only to other governments under a licensing system, and that full publicity be given exports every quarter.

Praises Arms Probe,

Mr. Roosevelt commended the creation of the Senate's Nye committee to investigate the manufacture and traffic in munitions and expressed the hope it conducts its inquiry "with a degree of thoroughness commensurate with the high importance of the question at issue." He promised cooperation of the executive branch of the Government.

Concerning the arms convention, the President declared its ratification, "which has been too long delayed, would be a concrete indication of the willingness of the American people to make their contribution toward the suppression of abuses which may have disastrous results for the entire world if they are permitted to continue unchecked."

Continuing, he expressed his earnest hope the disarmament conference convening at Geneva May 29 "will be able to agree upon a convention containing provisions for the supervision and control of the traffic in arms much more far-reaching than those which were embodied in the convention in 1925."

Assails Armament Race.

Although he did not set forth what he had in mind by way of strengthening the agreement, the President added that "some suitable international organization must and will take such action. The peoples of many countries are being taxed to the point of poverty and starvation in order to enable governments to engage in a mad race in armament which, if permitted to continue, may well result in war."

Ending a paragraph which was written obviously for consumption abroad, the President concluded that "this grave menace to the peace of the world is due in no small measure to the uncontrolled activities of the manufacturers and merchants of engines of destruction, and it must be met by the concerted action of the people of all nations."

After reading of the message, Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg (Republican), Michigan, said he thought he could assure the President the Nye committee's investigation will be pursued diligently. Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, added that his committee's "unity of purpose" inspired him to the belief it would be most thorough.

Letter From Hull.

In reporting the arms traffic convention, Pittman said that his committee instructed him on May 1 to present a favorable report. The accompanying resolution makes ratification subject to confirmation by the governments of Belgium, the British Empire, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Sweden and the U. S. S. R.

President Roosevelt followed in the footprints of his two predecessors, President Coolidge and President Hoover, in asking for acceptance of the old agreement. In addition, a letter by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, declaring "enlightened public opinion throughout the world has for many years urged its adoption," was sent the Foreign Relations Committee.

"We have reason to believe," Mr. Hull wrote, "that the ratification by this Government will probably result, within a brief interval, in other ratifications necessary to put the convention into effect * * * its remaining unratified can not fail to produce, with justification, the impression that we are indifferent to the important problems with which the convention deals."

Ratifying Nations.

Nations which have ratified the treaty unconditionally are China, Venezuela, the Netherlands and its colonies, Poland, Egypt, Spain, Latvia and Liberia. It has been accepted conditionally—subject to concurrence by other countries—by France, Great Britain, Denmark, Sweden and Australia.

The President's expression of hope that a stronger convention can be drafted precedes by only a few days the meeting of the Disarmament Conference in Geneva. A drafting committee of the conference has written such a convention dealing with traffic in arms, and it was thought likely that some action in this direction might be taken in the absence of any other achievement.

The Administration's decision to seek a prohibition on munitions sales to Bolivia and Paraguay followed a series of conferences at the State Department with South American diplomats. The United States is anxious that States bordering the two warring nations cooperate by restricting the transit of arms, but no action has been taken as yet.

Message on Munitions Control

President Roosevelt's message to the Senate yesterday, in which he proposed ratification of the nine-year-old international arms traffic convention as one step to control of munitions, follows in full:

I have been gratified to learn that, pursuant to a resolution of the Senate, a committee has been appointed to investigate the problems incident to the private manufacture of arms and munitions of war and the international traffic therein. I earnestly recommend that this committee receive the generous support of the Senate in order that it may be enabled to pursue the investigation with which it is charged with a degree of thoroughness commensurate with the high importance of the questions at issue. The Executive Departments of the Government will be charged to cooperate with the committee to the fullest extent in furnishing it with any information in their possession which it may desire to receive, and their views upon the adequacy or inadequacy of existing legislation and of the treaties to which the United States is a party for the regulation and control of the manufacture of and traffic in arms.

The private and uncontrolled manufacture of arms and munitions and the traffic therein has become a serious source of international discord and strife. It is not possible, however, effectively to control such an evil by the isolated action of any one country. The enlightened opinion of the world has long realized that this is a field in which international action is necessary. The negotiation of the Convention for the Supervision of the International Trade in Arms and Ammunition and in Implements of War, signed at Geneva, June 17, 1925, was an important step in the right direction. That convention is still before the Senate. I hope that the Senate may find it possible to give its advice and consent to its ratification. The ratification of that convention by this Government, which has been too long delayed, would be a concrete indication of the willingness of the American people to make their contribution toward the suppression of abuses which may have disastrous results for the entire world if they are permitted to continue unchecked.

It is my earnest hope that the representatives of the nations who will reassemble at Geneva on May 29 will be able to agree upon a convention containing provisions for the supervision and control of the traffic in arms much more far reaching than those which were embodied in the convention of 1925. Some suitable international organization must and will take such action. The peoples of many countries are being taxed to the point of poverty and starvation in order to enable governments to engage in a mad race in armament which, if permitted to continue, may well result in war. This grave menace to the peace of the world is due in no small measure to the uncontrolled activities of the manufacturers and merchants of engines of destruction, and it must be met by the concerted action of the peoples of all nations.

2 in Robbery Sent to Prison

Because they inveigled Herbert Glassman, automobile dealer, to a room in the Raleigh Hotel where they bound him with adhesive tape and robbed him of $1,600 and a stick pin valued at $500, James Earl Neal and Leslie T. Williams were sentenced yesterday to terms in the penitentiary by Justice Peyton Gordon, in the District Supreme Court.

Neal, already under sentence of 6 to 30 years for previous robberies, was given 3 to 15 years, the sentence to run concurrently with his prior term. Williams was given 2 to 4 years.

Besides the Glassman case, the two were involved in a housebreaking and larceny incident at the Arlington Hotel when a room occupied by a well known gambler was entered. While they were awaiting the return of the gambler, Detective Sergeant Frank O. Brass appeared in response to a call, and arrested them after gun play.

Jones Says Petroleum Bill Makes Ickes Czar

New York, May 18 (AP).—J. Edward Jones, chairman of the National Petroleum Council, in a statement tonight said the petroleum bill before Congress is "designed to make legal dictatorial powers of Secretary Ickes hitherto practiced stubbornly and ruthlessly, but never supported by law."

Jones attacked the speech of the Secretary of the Interior in Tulsa yesterday. The council he heads is composed of independent oil producers, refiners and marketers.

Closed Bank Aid Favored By House Unit

Bill Will Be Redrafted to Include Relief for Depositors.

(Associated Press.)

The House Banking Committee tacitly agreed yesterday that the Presidentially approved deposit insurance bill shall include provisions authorizing Federal relief for depositors in closed banks.

It dropped hearings on the measure to extend temporary deposit insurance until Chairman Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, and Representative Brown (Democrat), Michigan, can draft a bill embodying changes in the "pay-off" plan.

Committee members said, however, there might be an intention to include the closed bank stipulation in the bill passed by the House only to let it be struck out in conference.

As the tentative bill—yet to be finally approved by the committee—would shape up after the redrafting, it would raise the temporary deposit insurance maximum from $2,500 to $5,000 on July 1, 1934, and to $10,000 on January 1, 1935.

It is said, however, the $10,000 figure was being inserted only to make sure the limit would be raised to $5,000 on next July 1.

The new proposal also would allow the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to expand its stock three instead of five times to have funds with which to purchase or lend on assets in banks already closed, so depositors could be paid off immediately.

It would, though, segregate the FDIC money so it would have one fund for the assistance of depositors in banks already closed and another to pay off depositors in any banks which belong to the corporation and close later.

In addition, Steagall is to draft a new section to grant deposit insurance to mutual savings banks with their insurance limited to the present $2,500 figure. Mutual savings banks may not accept deposits of more than $7,500, and the $2,500 insurance covers more than 98 per cent of the depositors and 70 per cent of the money on deposit with them.

For the other banks, the $2,500 covers 96 per cent of the depositors and 41 per cent of the money.

Senator Sees Blind Gamble In Tariff Bill

by 29 each time we get one concession in return."

"We shall be the least favored nation when this process is concluded," he added.

The Michigan Senator replying to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's "America Must Choose," asserted that "we must choose and adhere to one course." He said the legislation would injure economic recovery because it would seriously impair it in that it runs contrary to the NRA and AAA, which automatically increase domestic costs and therefore require higher rather than lower tariffs.

"We can not go in two opposite directions at one and the same time," he asserted.

Sees Complications.

Moreover, Senator Vandenberg thought the bill objectionable because "it invites international complications of the precise type which we have scrupulously avoided for 140 years because it leans toward trade alliances which make for international blocs, hatreds and reprisals."

"It is a blind speculation in which we hand the President $90,000,000,000 worth of blue chips—that being the normal value of our domestic markets—with which to gamble away our American birthright, hoping against hope that we may win, but fearing against well-grounded fear that we shall lose as usual," he added.

In concluding, he contended the proposal was "futile" because articles on the free list are excluded from the power of the President to act. He said that under the free list $900,000,000 of foreign trade "favors are already granted for nothing." This is the place to start bargaining, "if we are to bargain at all," he contended.

Calls It "Reckless Folly."

He held that the whole scheme was "reckless folly" and caused some chuckles when he read what leading Democrats and said in denunciation of the flexible tariff clause. He said he could not undertsand how the Democrats could follow the President into "this larger and almost unlimited flexibility when they so violently condemned the lesser power five years ago."

Metcalf termed the tariff proposal the "gravest experiment" yet put forward by an Administration given to experimentation. He thought the scheme must have originated the "brain trust." Contending that adoption of the bill meant abandonment of the principle of tariff protection, he said the livelihood of 20,000 families in his State was threatened.

Davis, former Secretary of Labor, argued that labor was opposed to the legislation and that it would result in lowering living standards here. He proposed an amendment which would provide that the President could not make any trade agreements affecting any articles in the manufacture of which the cost of labor was cheaper abroad than at home. If adopted, the amendment would virtually nullify the purposes of the act.

Sweeney Sentenced On RobberyCounts

Gets 2 to 3 Years on Plea of Guilty.

Justice Peyton Gordon, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday ordered Elmer (Bulldog) Sweeney to serve a term of from two to three years, following a plea of guilty to two charges of robbery. Sweeney already is under sentence of from three to six years.

Sweeney, who only recently completed a sentence after conviction of manslaughter, entered pleas of guilty to charges of robbing filling stations. In one of his sorties a colored companion was shot and killed by Policeman Watson Salkeld.

Santa Stamp Was Farley Joke; "Ha, Ha," Country Wants It

Now Seek One for Father; Connecticut Also in Market.

By Harry Ferguson.

Mr. James A. Farley, boss of the U. S. mails, gathered the journalists around him the other day with the idea in mind of taking them for a sleigh ride by announcing he was going to put out a stamp in honor of Santa Claus.

It's getting sort of hot in Washington, and Mr. Farley figured a little joke would help cool fevered brows. The boys went for it in a big way and hustled right out to spread the news up and down the Republic that Kris Kringle was going to join Whistler's "Mother" in the list of folks who get their faces on stamps.

They even speculated in 8-point type about the design on the stamp, most of them figuring it would be a bearded gent crawling into a smokestack with a bag full of electric trains on his back.

"Ha-ha," ha-haed the Postoffice Department at the thought of making suckers out of the journalists.

They were singing a different tune yesterday when we dropped in to visit Mr. Ambrose, who is a sort of liaison man between Mr. Farley and the journalists. Seems the country not only thinks it would be a swell idea to have a Santa Claus stamp but also has written in with a lot of other ideas, most of which are headaches, to the Postoffice Department.

"If I had known those guys were going to take the Santa Claus stamp seriously," groaned Mr. Ambrose. "I would have painted a big sign and held it up, reading 'Mr. Farley is now telling a joke; one, two, three, everybody laugh.'"

One idea that came tumbling in was that there ought to be a Father's Day stamp, now that mother has had her inning. The author advanced the interesting theory that everybody has two parents and that if the U. S. A. insists on honoring mothers and neglecting dads there is grave danger of a fathers' strike.

That's only one of the troubles Mr. Farley's joke got him into. Connecticut wants a stamp all her own, and Wisconsin figures that so long as the bars are down she might as well have one, too. It's going to be tough sledding at the Postoffice Department for a while.

We told Mr. Ambrose we would forgive and forget if he would pass out a little news item to us to put in the papers, and he said he would. Are you ready?

"We printed some air-mail stamps one time," he said, "and the first batch came off the press with the airplane on them upside down. Some of them got into circulation and right now those stamps are worth $15,000 apiece."

"This is not another joke is it?" we inquired cautiously.

"Cross my heart and hope to die," replied Mr. Ambrose.

Next Congress Will Consider Social Reforms

Employment Insurance, Old-Age Pensions on White House List.

President Roosevelt's message on social legislation, which may be one of his most significant documents, is expected to call for the designing of a new pattern of life for the laboring man.

The joint Congressional committee which it is anticipated he will ask to study social legislation, will be entrusted, it was understood, with evolving a program to give the millions of toilers security against unemployment and proverty in old age. The program would be the basis of legislation in the next Congress.

Social legislation apparently has been sidetracked for this session in line with the President's wish for a balanced and unified permanent Federal program.

Joint Committee Will Advise.

The special House-Senate committee is expected to consist of four members from each chamber. It probably will collaborate through the summer with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, as well as other Administration specialists in social legislation.

Unemployment insurance, old age pensions, workmen's compensation and the vast problem of finding jobs for all in the machine age, comprise the objectives involved.

A coordinated Federal and State unemployment and sickness insurance plan will probably be considered, undoubtedly along the lines of Wagner-Lewis bill, which the President favors "in principle."

The measure calls for an excise tax of from 3 to 5 per cent on industrial pay rolls. Miss Perkins has estimated a 5 per cent levy would raise $1,000,000,000 even in a depression year for insurance benefit purposes. Under this plan employers could make deductions if contributing to a State insurance system.

Dill-Connery Bill Basis.

The Dill-Connery old age pension bill is likely to be the basis for old age aid legislation. It calls for Federal aid to States cooperating to establish certain standards of old age security. At present only 28 States have old age pension laws.

Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins has estimated that 20,000,000 aged people now being cared for either through charity or State, county and Federal aid, will eventually have to be taken care of by a direct pension system.

The long range social-aid program would be designed to prevent the Nation from encountering in the future serious depression periods. The unemployment insurance reserves, and pensions would act as safety valves by keeping purchasing power at a near normal level, when a "bad business" period begins to develop.

Shipping Firm 'All American,' Says Franklin

I. M. M. Investment Told to Senate Group by Company Head.

The International Mercantile Marine Co. is thoroughly American, its president, P. A. S. Franklin, declared yesterday. Franklin was a witness before the Senate Mail Contract Investigating Committee, which has been going into details concerning the operation of the company.

"The extent of the I. M. M.'s interest in American merchant marine," he said, "is set forth in the fact that it, together with companies owning or operating American flag steamers exclusively, in which the I. M. M. Co. has a substantion intrest, have invested approximately $23,300,000 in American flag shipping.

"As against this the direct financial intrest of the I. M. M. Co. in foreign tonnage is limited to $8,600,000. This amount represents the total of money which wholly-owned subsidiaries of the I. M. M. Co. have invested in foreign flag tonnage."

He added that in addition to this, there is a total of $11,397,500 due on the sale of the White Star Line to the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. in 1926. He said the I. M. M. owns or operates 35 American ships and 9 ships flying the British flag.

Franklin told the committee that all of the company's British tonnage could have been sold to a British syndicate in 1918, but that President Wilson objected and the deal did not go through.

Litvinoff Visits Geneva; Arms Pact Is Hinted

strictly European agreement providing for assistance in the event the political security of any of the signatories is threatened.

Such an agreement was regarded as a practical preliminary to an accord for the reduction of limitation of armaments.

Litvinoff's visit revived discussion of the belief held in some quarters that the Soviet Union is giving serious consideration to membership in the League.

Prior to Litvinoff's coming, league circles gave indications of deep discouragement over the apparent impasse in moves toward an arms accord. Now the comment has taken on a more optimistic tone.

An international pact of nonaggression as proposed by President Roosevelt was said in well-informed circles to be one of the suggestions Litvinoff planned to put forward.

Also, in an attempt to keep the Disarmament Conference alive, he would urge concentration on the elaboration of a pact of mutual assistance and security to fortify the organization of peace.

An attempt would be made in such a pact to define aggressor nations.

On the question of League membership the opinion was rife that the British and French attitude toward admitting Russia may have encouraged her to express willingness to join.

The Soviet commissar's talk with Barthou is generally believed to have had to do, apart from disarmament, with membership ideas.

Litvinoff cagily dodged the question in talking with newspapermen after the conference, but admitted that "a little of everything" had been discussed.

An indication of the importance of Litvinoff's visit to Geneva was given tonight when Barthou said he must consult the French cabinet before revealing the details of their talk.

League officials said they had the impression Litvinoff was hostile to returning the disarmament problem to the league council and that he has "constructive ideas."

He was informed, they said, that the prospects of smashing the present deadlock did not seem brilliant.

U. S. Reports to Geneva 40-Hour Week Success

Geneva, May 18 (AP).—A statement from the United States Government that a work week of 40 hours or less has proved a success was made public tonight by the International Labor Office.

Longshoremen Strike Parley Makes Progress

San Francisco, May 18 (AP).—Definite progress to settle the strike of Pacific Coast longshoremen and other affiliated unions was made today, Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, announced after a meeting of representatives of the employers and strikers.

"Both committees representing the employers and the workers are entering wholeheartedly into negotiations which we believe eventually will bring about the settlement of the troubles on the Pacific Coast," McGrady said.

Paper Asked For Evidence In Air Charge

Editorial Stated Radio Is Made Spokesman for New Deal.

(Associated Press.)

The Radio Commission by resolution yesterday asked the New York Herald Tribune to furnish "any facts or other material" to support its recent editorial assertion that the Roosevelt Administration through licensing powers had made the radio "the spokesman of the New Deal."

The text follows:

"Whereas on May 12, 1934, the New York Herald Tribune, Ogden Mills Reid, president and editor, in its editorial column, published the following:

" 'The radio, controlled by the Administration through its licensing power, was made the spokesman of the New Deal and largely restricted to Government propaganda,' and

"Whereas the Federal Radio Commission, pursuant to the provisions of the radio act of 1927, is the 'licensing power,' and

"Whereas, the Federal Radio Commission, consistent with the prohibition contained in Section 29 of the radio act of 1927, as follows:

" 'Nothing in this act shall be understood or construed to give the licensing authority the power of censorship over the radio communications or signals transmitted by any radio station, and no regulation or condition shall be promulgated or fixed by the licensing authority which shall interfere with the right of free speech by means of radio communications. * * *' Has never 'controlled' or 'restricted' radio programs to 'Government propaganda,' or attempted in any way so to do:

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that Mr. Ogden Mills Reid, the president and editor of the New York Herald Tribune, be and is hereby, requested to furnish the commission any facts or other material, including the names of parties furnishing the same, which would support, or tend to support, the statements made in the editorial column of said newspaper."

come taxes, control over agricultural crops and also the extent to which cooperative agencies had entered the processing and marketing field.

"The extent to which other countries have adopted or promoted processing and marketing agencies of a public, quasi-public, or cooperative sort, for the simplification and cheapening of the processing and marketing of agricultural products, and other administrative agencies which may have been set up for the protection of the farmer-producer and the consumer," is also in the scope of the proposed inquiry.

Changes Draw Fire.

The commission would report its findings to the next session of Congress, along with recommendations for legislation.

The changes proposed in the agricultural adjustment act were vigorously assailed by representatives of milling and other groups on the grounds that they would give the Secretary a life and death power over the businesses affected.

The question was debated at length in committee, but members reported only slight changes had been made in the Farm Administration's proposals. The modifications apparently were satisfactory to Chester Davis, farm administrator, and other of the Secretary's assistants who attended the three-hour discussion.

Formal approval, however, was withheld until today since several other amendments to the farm act, other than those advocated by Wallace, are pendind.

Rainbow on Trial Spin Shows Speed In Moderate Wind

Bristol, R. I., May 18 (AP).—In a trial trip in Narrangansett Bay, Rainbow, potential American cup defender, built for the New York syndicate headed by Harold S. Vanderbilt, logged 11½ miles an hour when she got the full force of the northwest breeze on a broad reach along the shore of Conanicut Island today.

At no time during the 2½ hours Rainbow was under way was the breeze harder than 15 miles an hour. Only when it was at its best and Rainbow jammed hard on the wind did she get her lee rail well under. Most of the time she had at least a foot of her freeboard out.

At the end of the trip, Commodore Vanderbilt, who will sail her in all her trials against Weetamoe and Yankee; W. Starling Burgess, who designed her, and George Monsell, Rainbow's professional skipper, expressed themselves as well pleased.

Silk Mills Fail In Fight on NRA

Recovery Act Is Upheld in Fedreal Court.

Gainesville, Ga., May 18 (AP).—The National Recovery Act today was held by a Federal District Court to have been created in an emergency and is constitutional.

Judge E. Marvin Underwood handed down the decision in the Northern District of Georgia in the case of the Richmond hosiery mills of Rossville, Ga., across the State line from Chattanooga, which tried to obtain an injunction preventing the district attorney from presenting charges that it had violated the NRA code to the grand jury.

The mill was charged with having agreed to operate its plant in excess of the total number of hours provided in the code.

Nursery, Adult, Rehabilitation Schools Continue to June 20

Nursery, adult education and rehabilitation schools will be continued through until the close of the regular school term, the District Emergency Relief Committee decided yesterday.

Closing of these relief projects would have thrown the 85 persons engaged as teachers and housekeepers out of work. The committee's action makes their positions safe until June 20.

The committee has not determined whta the fate of the schools will be after that date, Capt. H. F. Clark, head of the committee, said that the projects had been very expensive and perhaps the money should go into other relief channels.

In the nursery schools there are 32 teachers and 10 housekeepers who will retain their jobs. There are 35 teachers in the adult education groups, while eight are employed in rehabilitation work with the blind, deaf and otherwise disabled.

This work formerly was financed through funds expecially designated for the purpose by the Federal Relief Administration. This was stopped on May 15.

Johnson Fears Hard-Coal Code May Bring War

Anthracite Miners' Revolt Looming; Light-Power Pact Ready Soon.

Imposition of a code on the anthracite coal industry might cause open revolt by miners, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson declared yesterday.

The recovery chieftian said little progress had been made recently in efforts to negotiate a trade agreemnt for the hard coal business. He added conferences would continue, but he seemed dubious over the outlook.

Johnson explained one large group of anthracite miners held out for high daily wages, while another equally strong element was militantly opposed to spreading work among the unemployed through staggering of hours.

An electric light and power code, he said, will be ready for presidential approval shortly. Long delay had resulted from efforts of power interests to use the pact as a means of controlling and limiting Government competition.

Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel, predicted the prospective agreement on the power code would result in early compromises on pending agreements for other public utilities, including natural gas.

Johnson also disclosed an aluminum code was about to be accepted by the industry. He said the discussion had narrowed to a dispute over language, to prevent Aluminum Co. subsidiaries from getting better prices for their metal than are available to independents.

He reiterated revision of the steel code was substantially completed and would be announced in about a week. The alterations will become effective when the present agreement expires May 31.

Dogs Must Be Muzzled Soon.

The annual dog-muzzling order was issued yesterday by the District Commissioners. This requires that all dogs, except when on leash, shall be muzzled for four months following June 1.

Former Employe Held as Author Of Kidnap Notes

Newark, N. J., May 18 (AP).—Horace Stevenson, 25, Negro, who allegedly confessed he attempted to extort $10,000 from a South Orange woman on threat of kidnaping her 4-year-old daughter, was committed to jail today in default of $25,000 bail.

The bail was set by United States Commissioner Holland when the Negro was arraigned before him on charges of sending threatening letters through the mails and attempted extortion.

It was not until the arraignment that news of the threats received by Mrs. J. K. Lasser, of South Orange, was made public by local police and postoffice inspectors, who have been working on the case.

Stevenson was arrested late last night while loitering near the Lasser home and after hours of questioning police said he signed a confession in which he admitted he was the author of four extortion notes. The Negro was formerly employed as a houseman by the Lassers.

Smith Resigns As Morgenthau Aid in Treasury

Secretary Pays Tribute to Work of Special Assistant.

Secretary Morgenthau announced the resignation of Tom K. Smith, who has served as his special assistant since November 27, the Associated Press reported.

The resignation will be effective today.

He has served as Morgenthau's advisor on banking problems. The Secretary said in announcing his retirement:

"I am extremely sorry to have to lose the services of Tom K. Smith. He has done a wonderful work in the Treasury Department at a critical and trying time.

"His help was so valuable that I persuaded him to stay far beyond the period for which he originally consented to come.

"He is leaving now only because he feels that it is urgently necessary to give attention to his responsibilities in St. Louis.

"Not only am I personally deeply grateful to him, but I feel that he deserves public recognition of able services to the Nation."

Smith early this year was offered and refused the post of under secretary. It has since been filled by Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, of Boston.

Virginia Board Liquor Orders Pass $300,000

Portion of New Stock of 2,500 Cases Will Go to Norfolk.

Richmond, May 18 (Spl.).—Catching up with a heavy demand which now has begun to embrace the finer liquors as well as the inexpensive small package grades, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has ordered 2,500 additional cases of stock, valued at $50,000 to $60,000.

This brought the total orders of the board beyond the $300,000 mark. Of this amount approximately half is on repeat orders based upon the demand as it has developed in four Richmond stores, the only ones opened thus far.

Some of the stock goes to Norfolk over the week-end for the shops to be opened there in about ten days. Shelving and other equipment already has been shipped to Norfolk, and personnel for the stores there is being chosen by T. McCall Frazier, member of the board, who is going there. The board will memorialize the Virginia delegation in Congress, asking that Federal liquor licenses be changed to separate wine and beer from hard liquors.

The step will be taken because of a situation created by the issuance of Federal permits here. Federal licenses, the board learns, give dealers the right to handle both wine and beer and whisky and allied high content alcoholic beverages. Under the State law only beer and wine may be sold by private licenses.

Thus, the board says, a Federal license holder here might stock his store with whisky, paying the Federal stamp tax on the goods, and be immune from Federal prosecution. The board thinks that situation will result in a sidestepping of the Virginia control act.

The Virginia Congressional delegation will be asked to work for an amendment to the Federal liquor license act which will divide the wine and beer permits from those for whisky and other hard liquors.

Water Improved At Shepherdstown

Shepherdstown, W. Va., May 18 (Spl.).—Shepherdstown Light & Water Co. is making improvements which, when completed, will provide an adequate and safe water supply at all times, complying with the requirements of the State Department of Health.

A system of sand gravity filters is being installed and duplicate pumps will avoid the possibility of failure of water supply in case of trouble with one of the pumps. A third improvement, addition of chemical treating equipment, will afford greater assurance of bacteria-free water.

A special town election has been called for June 9 to pass on a proposed $2,500 bond issue to finance the extension of the town sewer system. Bonds are required for the estimated cost of materials, labor to be supplied by the National Emergency Relief Administration. Shepherdstown is free of any bonded indebtedness.

500 Democrats Attend Meeting

Crisfield, Md., May 18 (Spl.).—A crowd of 500 Somerset county Democrats filled the armory here today at a mass meeting sponsored by the Democratic League of Somerset County. Dr. Stephen P. Fuller, president, presided.

State Senator Dudley Rowe, of Sudlersville, Queen Annes County, prospective candidate for State comptroller, was the principal speaker. He stressed the fact that after candidates have been selected in the primary, the voters should get out and support the ticket.

The meeting here inaugurated a series of weekly sessions which are to be held at various towns in the county. The next meeting will be in Princess Anne.

Agnew Asks Milk Group to Meeting

Burkeville, Va., May 18 (AP).—J. S. Agnew, chairman of the State milk commission, said today that he had wired the other two members of the group asking them to meet him in Richmond Monday.

He was appointed by Gov. George C. Peery yesterday to head the commission which will exercise control over Virginia's dairy industry under the terms of an act passed by the General Assembly at its recent session.

The other two members of the commission are Kone Brugh, of Mace, Va., and Dr. T. R. Snavely, economist of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville.

Robbery Suspect Drops in Chimney

Baltimore, May 18 (AP).—Charles Wilson, 24, colored, plunged 40 feet down a large smoke stack here early today and had to be rescued by police and firemen before they could arrest him on a burglary charge.

He was not seriously injured, physicians said, and after receiving treatment for bruises and scratches he was held on a charge of attempting to loot a down town store.

Eight patrolmen sought him for an hour before one of them sighted him on top of the store's tall stack. At that moment he disappeared down the inside of the chimney. Firemen were called and he was hauled out with a rope.

Death Closes Useful Career Of Dr. Stewart

D. C. Bateriologist Long Known for Research in Vaccine Field.

An 11-year fight for health has ended in death for Dr. James Reverdy Stewart, well-known Washington bacteriologist, it was learned here yesterday.

Dr. Stewart died Thursday night in a sanitarium at Saranac Lake, N. Y., where he had gone four years ago in an attempt to recover from an illness which friends here attributed to his devotion to his profession. He was 60 years old.

Dr. Stewart was widely known in Washington medical circles as the director of the National Vaccine Antitoxin Establishment and more recently for his work in connection with the operation of the clinical laboratory, in the Washington medical building.

His career was devoted entirely to research and laboratory phases of medicine. His antitoxin establishment produced a variety of serums and was patronized extensively by physicians and hospitals throughout the country.

Dr. Stewart came to Washington in 1895 and was associated for several years with pathological division of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry, Department of Agriculture. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewin Stewart, of Warsaw, Va. He studied dentistry at the Columbia School of Dentistry, turning to bacteriology following graduation.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Anna Sanford Stewart; a brother, Walter D. Stewart, and a sister, Mrs. Sarah Folger, of Nantucket, Mass. Interment was at Gloucester Courthouse, Va.

Dr. Strohaver, Dean at G. U., Dies Suddenly

Dr. George F. Strohaver, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of Georgetown University, died suddenly yesterday at the university hospital after a week's illness. He was 48 years old and was completing his second year at Georgetown.

Dr. Strohaver went to the hospital for treatment of a rheumatic trouble which was not thought serious. Fever and infection developed and he had been unconscious about 12 hours when he died.

Noted as a preacher and scientist, Dr. Strohaver came here in the summer of 1932 from Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass. He had been professor of chemistry there since 1925 and later was made head of its new chemistry department, which he founded. At the time of his appointment to the Georgetown College faculty he was made head of the chemistry department, which he reorganized. He was promoted to dean of arts and sciences last year and continued also to direct the studies in chemistry.

Dr. Strohaver was better known in Washington, during his brief stay here, as a preacher. He spoke frequently on the National Catholic Hour and a few months ago concluded a series of sermons delivered for the Knights of Columbus Catholic Forum in St. Matthew's Church. These sermons were primarily for non-Catholics.

Dr. Strohaver was born in Baltimore, September 2, 1886, and was graduated from Loyola College in that city in 1917. The same year he entered the Society of Jesus. He was a student at the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) house of studies and then was stationed at Holy Cross College, after completing an advanced course in chemistry at Fordham University.

Dr. Strohaver superintended and planned the establishment of the chemistry laboratories in the new science building at Georgetown University after coming here. He had taken active parts in the meetings of the American Chemical Society and other scientific bodies, as well as the national science organization of the Jesuit Society. According to university officials, he had no close living relatives. Arrangements are being made for funeral services Monday morning. The office of the dead will be recited at 8 a. m. in Dahlgren Chapel, followed by the mass of requiem at 9 o'clock. He will be buried in the Jesuit cemetery at the college.

Millions Set For Drought Aid to West

Relief Administration to Buy Cattle, Help Families Move.

Millions of dollars of Government funds will be poured into the drought-stricken area of the West under a program being perfected yesterday by the Emergency Relief Administration and the Farm Administration.

Major parts of the program include:

Purchase of large numbers of cattle to be processed and distributed as beef to the needy.

Expenditure of $6,000,000 a month for the duration of the drought, the money to be used in work relief and in direct relief in the affected sections. This will be in addition to the money spent for buying cattle.

Removal of 3,000 to 4,000 families, mostly in South Dakota, from unproductive farms to more productive land.

To Prevent Starvation.

Expenditure of at least $1,000,000 for seeds for quick-growing forage crops for feeding live stock.

The cattle-buying program will be pushed rapidly to prevent starvation of thousands of animals. In some sections live stock has been turned into wheat fields to eat what is left of the young crop. This is being done in sections in which forage crops are completely destroyed.

The Government will condemn cattle not fit for food consumption and pay the farmers for the animals. The remainder will be turned into beef. The extent of the cattle buying program has not been definitely determined, but it is expected to be the largest purchasing of live stock yet undertaken by the Government.

Money for buying the cattle is expected to be provided under the Jones-Connally act. The entire program is expected to cost more than $50,000,000.

The $6,000,000 to be used for making work and for direct relief has not been allotted, but it is expected that a large portion of this amount will go to direct relief.

May Be Seed Shortage.

Under the seed program, a total of $600,000 already has been allotted and the remainder is expected to be distributed immediately. A problem in this connection is a probable shortage in available seeds.

In many sections the drought has progressed so far that rain now will not help the situation much. The new seed will be planted with the hope that there will be rain after it is planted. Otherwise, it, too, will be a loss.

The plan to move families in South Dakota from unproductive land was announced by Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator. He indicated that the farmers will be moved to land now owned by the State. He said the land on which they now live has been virtually non productive for a long time.

Reports that the drought is growing worse are pouring into both the Agriculture Department and the relief administration. From some sections it was reported that cattle have lost weight so rapidly that they are not marketable and that live stock is dying as a result of breathing dust.

Red River Valley Hard Hit.

From the Red River Valley came reports that 75 per cent of the grain crop had been destroyed. From other sections, reports said that a fourth of the crop planted had not come up and that a fourth of the usual acreage had not even been planted.

The Farm Administration will modify its adjustment contract planting restrictions to permit unlimited planting of forage crops on farms under contracts, but they do not release the contracted or rented acres which are to be left out of basic crop production under terms of the contracts.

Cattle purchases will be made directly from farmers and paid for on the basis of local market prices without consideration of the price at Chicago or other live stock marketing centers.

The entire program is expected to get under way in the Dakotas, Minnesota and Wisconsin next week. It will be spread to other areas as the need arises.

Hearings Are Delayed On 'Patronage Plot'

Lack of a quorum yesterday delayed further hearing by the Senate Civil Service Committee of an alleged "patronage plot" in which it was charged Republicans planned to keep jobs at the cost of Democratic office seekers.

Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, former prohibition director, author of the charge, submitted a list of witnesses he desired subpenaed. Senator William J. Bulow (Democrat), South Dakota, declined to make the list public.

Tin Scrap Legislation Gets Favorable Action

Legislation to restrict the exportation of tin scrap from the United States advanced in Congress yesterday with the deceision of a House Military Affairs sub-committee to recommend favorable action on the Faddis (Democrat), Pennsylvania, bill, according to the Associated Press.

The committee has heard reports that Japan purchases tin-plate scrap and tin-bearing scrap for munitions manufacturing.

Early Agreement Seen On Air Mail Measures

An early agreement between the Senate and House on pending air-mail legislation was predicted yesterday after the conferees on the bill conferred with President Roosevelt, the Associated Press reported.

Both Chairman McKellar of the Senate Postoffice Committee and Chairman Mead of the House Committee said the principles had been found to permit an early agreement between the two branches.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WE have developed a weakness for wrestling. That doesn't mean that those of our friends who still honor us with an occasional visit must be prepared to indulge in an amiable exchange of headlocks. We have merely a spectator's interest in the sport.

The development occurred as recently as last Thursday night, when, in the company of a couple of WJSV junior executives and an old friend from Toledo, we visited Washington Auditorium. That this weakness has been hidden in us all our life merely waiting such a moment for discovery is apparent in the fact that we saw ourself, professionally, not as an intruder in the journalistic realm of the sports department, but as a radio editor diligently seeking after hidden truths in the behind-the-microphone lives of announcers, control men, &c.

The excuse was feeble, downright feeble, of course. What we really wanted was to get away from the office for a soiree with Mr. Turner's monumental young men, for a session of eye-gouging and other forms of legalized mayhem. As we quickly discovered, viewing a wrestling show from behind the microphone is just like viewing it from anywhere else, and anything written about it belongs on the sports pages and can be found here only because your radio editor's resistance is low when it comes to wrestling.

TED CHURCH, of WJSV, whom C. B. S. recently has designated as a special announcer for the fleet review May 31, was our host. He came very near to spoiling our whole evening and leaving our weakness only incompletely developed by carefully pointing out not infrequent inclinations on the part of the combatants to lapse from athletics to histrionics. But Announcer Jim McGrath, radio's wrestling authority, who was the man we had come to see anyway, renewed our interest in the proceedings with sworn testimony to the effect that Mr. Turner's young men often do themselves serious bodily damage.

Thus satisfied, we paid further attention to Mr. Church only occasionally to shove a hand into his popcorn bag, and while we and almost everyone else were still howling approvingly over the battered and prostrate Mr. Dusek, we happened to remember that the circus had been in town for two days, and that N. B. C. sent some of its radio men there. Next year we mean to develop a real weakness for circuses.

And just in case any of our bosses get the notion that we have been wasting our time, we would have them understand that we learned a sure-fire method of getting away should some bruiser leap on them with a half-nelson one night. Rub his back. It works everytime. All we wrestling fans know that.

Ogden Mills, former President Hoover's Secretary of the Treasury, has found an "R" in Mr. Tugwell's "Evolution" . . . how, when and why he will tell the New York State convention of Young Republican Clubs in a speech to be broadcast through WMAL at 1:30 p. m. today . . . humor and drama in the life of a movie-struck country boy in Hollywood . . . that is the material of a new dramatic series beginning on WRC this afternoon at 4 under the title, "Zeke and Sam" . . . the Mills Brothers, now in their second week at the London Palladium, were the first colored vaudeville-radio team to play a command performance for the British king . . . they sang "Lazybones" . . . Threat of Hunger March Brings Jobs for Hundreds at Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., May 18 (Spl.).—Several hundred jobless are expected to return to work on projects of the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration here in the next few days, following information from Richmond that $22,000 has been allocated to this city.

Until late this week Federal funds had been withheld from the city for some unexplained reason.

Action was obtained, however, when several hundred jobless threatened a hunger march on city hall, but deferred the march in favor of sending a committee of ten to confer with City Manager W. P. Hunter in regard to obtaining work. Clarence E. McGee headed the committee. The city manager immediately telephoned the Richmond office of VERA and was notified that $22,000 was being sent at once to meet the local situation.

As a result, 80 men were put to work yesterday in Wasena Park and it is planned to give work to hundreds of others, E. B. Brown, local projects engineer, says. The Roanoke Social Service Bureau has been unable to give any relief for nearly two weeks on account of the lack of funds. On several occasions there have been rumblings of discontent among the jobless.

Officers were reelected. They included Dr. E. J. Woofter, of Salem, president; the Rev. R. O. Lucke, of Parsons, vice president, and the Rev. A. H. Rapking, of Good Hope, secretary-treasurer.

Crab Protected By NRA Code

Taking of Egg-Bearing Females Prohibited in Chesapeake.

Salisbury, May 18 (Spl.).—Representatives of the crabbing industry in Maryland and Virginia, meeting here today, were informed that the NRA code has provided conservation measures for the Chesapeake Bay crab which the Legislatures of two States could not achieve.

Swepson Earle, Maryland State Conservation Commissioner, said the crabbing code prohibits taking of the sponge or egg-bearing female crab from the Chesapeake at any time.

Maryland adopted conservation measures in 1926, when indications pointed to rapid extinction of the female crab. Since then the value of the crabbing industry has increased from $29,000,000 to $68,000,000 in Maryland waters, he said.

The code, which went into effect last Monday, promises a brighter future for the industry, Earle stated. It regulates wages for labor and establishes regulations for fair trade practices, designed to eliminate price-cutting, high commissions and concessions.

Cash Pay Permitted Certain Relief Workers

Richmond, May 18 (AP).—William A. Smith, Virginia emergency relief administrator, informed county relief directors today that in certain cases relief workers in rural localities may be paid in cash instead of kind.

Payments of cash should be confined, he said, to cases in which workers "can not be properly aided by grants in kind to rehabilitate themselves."

Former Railway Shop Worker Finishes Theological Education

Cumberland, Md., May 18 (Spl.).—Charles Carlyle Jones, formerly a machinist in the shops of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad here, has completed theological instructon at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., and Duboise Seminary, Monteagle, Tenn., and is eligible to enter the Protestant Episcopal Church ministry.

Jones lived in Holloway, Ohio, before he was transferred to the shops here. While still a student he worked during the summer months as a missionary in the mountains and backwoods sections of South Carolina and Tennessee under the priests of the Order of the Holy Cross.

He expects to return to Baltimore for his final examinations this month, prior to being ordained to the deaconate by the Right Rev. Edward Trail Helfenstein, Episcopal Bishop of Maryland. His ordination as a priest will probably take place here at the Holy Cross Church.

Jones was a member of Local No. 212, International Association of Machinists.

Auto Crash Victim To Receive $9,000

Harrisonburg, Va., May 18 (Spl.). Hearing of the $50,000 damage suit of Miss Emma Bailes, of Tarboro, N. C., against C. P. Nelson, of Huntington, W. Va., ended in Rockingham Circuit Court this afternoon with a compromise of $9,000.

Miss Bailes' claim was for injuries received last June in an automobile collision on the Valley pike north of here. Nelson was accused of negligence. She suffered a crushed face and other injuries which it was claimed would permanently impair her health.

All evidence was completed and the final arguments of counsel were about to proceed when the compromise was reached. Judge H. W. Bertram then dismissed the jury and entered the order settling the claim. The suit was the first heard here in which two out-of-State parties were involved.

Norfolk Coal Man Guilty of Perjury

W. C. Wright to Appeal for New Trial.

Norfolk, Va., May 18 (Spl.).—W. C. Wright, president of the Wright Coal Co., and prominent in business circles, was found guilty of perjury this morning by a jury in the Federal District Court.

Judge Luther B. Way deferred passing sentence until he hears a motion for a new trial which will be argued next week. Wright was indicted on two counts, forgery and concealing assets in a bankruptcy petition. He was dismissed on the latter charge.

A feature of the trial was the admission by the court of testimony given at a previous trial by J. H. Levine, who has since died. The court declared the testimony could be admitted. This decision will be one of the defense's main points for asking a reversal of the verdict of guilty if a new trial is denied.

Capt. McCrary Will Get Naval Air Bureau Job

Comdr. McGinnis, Record Squadron Flight Leader, Also Transferred.

Appointment of Capt. Frank R. McCrary, Navy balloon expert, for duty as assistant chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, to succeed Capt. A. B. Cook, who will become commanding officer of the U. S. S. Lexington, was announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

At the same time Lieut. Comdr. Knefler McGinnis, who commanded the recent nonstop Naval squadron flight to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, was assigned to the flight section of the bureau.

Capt. McCrary, who early established himself as an expert in Naval torpedoes, and a pioneer in the development of dirigibles, will report for duty on June 5.

The first naval officer to be qualified in free-ballooning and as a lighter-than-air pilot, Capt. McCrary is one of the few naval officers who holds a pilot's designation for both types of craft. During the World War he served in France with the naval aviation detachment. He was the first commanding officer of the Navy dirigible Shenandoah.

Lieut. McGinnis, before leading the longest nonstop formation flight on record, was in command of Squadron 10-F, Aircraft Base, with the United States Fleet, since April 3, 1931.

Cass Gilbert.

To millions of Americans the Woolworth Building symbolized New York. Built by a fortune amassed from nickels and dimes, the proud Gothic building towered over a city far removed in spirit from the inner meaning of its architectural style. It was the first of the great skyscrapers.

Alas for New York, it was not the last. Hundreds of others shouldered their way into the smoky sky of Gotham and, as the city was a Babel of tongues, so it became a mixture of all styles. The lush era which Cass Gilbert ushered in with the Woolworth Tower came to a halt with the building of Empire State. Between the two extremes—the Gothic temple of business and the "modern" city-under-a-dirigible-mast—there exist a few lovely structures—the perfect welding of steel, stone and glass, the wedding of function with beauty.

Cass Gilbert built none of these. But this fact does not detract from his eminence. He showed the way, after Louis Sullivan had sung the song before him, of using steel and stone to make the topless towers of Ilium huts in the valley. He had partly heard Sullivan's words, and had said himself: "My plea is for beauty and sincerity, for the solution of our own problems in the spirit of our own age, illuminated by the light of the past. To carry on, to shape new thoughts, new hopes, new desires in new forms of beauty as we may and can, but to disregard nothing of the past that may guide us in doing so."

And so he ceased building skyscrapers after being the first to pierce Manhattan's upper clouds, saying skyscrapers were for a congested city, but not where there was room and air. It must be left to the social critics to decide whether skyscrapers are right for cities or whether the problems they bring forth are not more difficult of solution than those their towering heights were devised to solve.

Cass Gilbert was a great man, and well beloved. He was that rare person, the business man with the soul of an artist and the means of expression. From his mind came the Woolworth Tower; from it also came the simple plans for the Supreme Court Building in Washington. He had range as well as depth of wisdom. As is so often the case with an architect, his words are as important as his buildings. And so, as one turns his head toward the Woolworth Tower and scans slowly those others that rise around it, perhaps the best tribute that can be paid to the memory of Cass Gilbert is to remember his words, and seek the wisdom behind them:

"We have carried concentration too far now. We must begin to think of decentralization."

That "Slight Change."

The "slight change" which Senator Fletcher made in the liberalizing amendments to the securities act turns out to have been a major revision, largely nullifying one of the most important concessions made to critics of the existing drastic liability provisions. The mere suspicion that the Senate has been a victim of a clever maneuver to exploit its ignorance of the character of the proposed legislation shows that the country has fallen on evil days.

In the nature of the case Congress is compelled to vote upon many highly technical measures that individual members must accept on faith. They have to depend upon explanations offered by their colleagues who are responsible for drafting the bills in committee. And expert outside assistance is often essential to give effect to the wishes of the legislators. If a condition arises which creates a suspicion of the disinterestedness of these expert advisers, their services should be dispensed with at once.

Such men are in a position to take an unfair advantage of their position, if they are minded to do so. Unfortunately there is a good deal of evidence tending to show that some of them have overstepped legitimate bounds in the past and dictated legislation instead of following instructions. For that reason the public is beginning to be suspicious of the "surprises" and "mistakes" that have crept into our emergency laws.

During the special session, when Congress was frankly responding to the crack of the Executive whip and passing laws with as little consideration as if they were inescapable decrees, legislative "jokers" might pass for errors due to haste. But no such excuse is possible in the present instance. Even if Senator Fletcher's suppression of vital information was inadvertent, it is unpardonable, in view of the important issues at stake. A legislative body that falls under suspicion of having surrendered its right of independent judgment is in a fair way to forfeit the confidence of the people, and defeat the ends for which representative government has been established. The mere fact that the American people are beginning to suspect the existence of an extra-legislative group of lawmakers ought to arouse Congress to vigilant defense of its privileges and prerogatives.

Once Bit, Twice Shy.

With all the force of his wide historical knowledge, and all the persuasiveness of his great oratorical skill, Senator Borah has sought to focus opposition to the pending tariff legislation on Constitutional grounds.

His selection of the method of attack was wise. From the National economic viewpoint the case for the legislation is strong. While likely to be disappointing in immediate results it would represent an important step toward freeing international trade from its present fetters, an outcome more necessary to domestic recovery than many Americans seem to realize. And such a step might well mark a decisive turn away from that excessive economic nationalism which is proving so universally destructive to the vitality of the capitalistic system.

The issues involved, however, are not merely economic and Senator Borah does well to lay stress on their Constitutional implications. Insufficient thought is today being given to the very important subject of the relations of the Chief Executive to Congress. Yet, as Mr. Borah points out, it is extremely easy to create precedents injurious to the delicate balance of executive and legislative powers which is so important a characteristic of our system of government. "A child may play across the Mississippi at its source, but as it flows on it may * * * divide a continent."

The value of the study of our Constitutional history consists largely in its revelation of the importance of precedents, and consequent ability to recognize what is involved thereby. Broader Constitutional knowledge would have perhaps saved the Administration from the blunder made this week with regard to the harmonization of House and Senate bills on stock exchange regulation. There was, of course, mere ineptitude in the affront accorded Senator Glass in omitting him from the list of Senate conferees, and the subsequent expression of Executive preference for the House measure, when Mr. Glass understood that the Senate bill had White House approval. But such bungling becomes the more serious because of its Constitutional implications. It has been made to appear that the President will not hesitate to attempt a short-circuit of the Senate's wishes, if strategical advantage can be secured thereby.

This casual attitude toward our whole philosophy of government, exhibited on numerous occasions during the past 14 months, has done much to impair confidence in the Administration. Much doubt is apparent as to the desirability of giving the Executive new powers, under the cloak of economic emergency. To this doubt Senator Borah has appealed, cogently, shrewdly and forcefully.

In the case of the pending tariff bill he has probably overstated his case. This measure, from a Constitutional viewpoint, would seem to be no more than a mandate to perform certain properly administrative functions in conformity with rules laid down by Congress. But if the rules laid down are more rigid and hampering than is compatible with the full effectiveness of tariff negotiations, it will be hard to blame opposition Senators for that. It is an old, old truth that those who have been once bit become twice shy.

At Oberammergau.

The three hundredth anniversary of the beginning of the Oberammergau Passion plays is being held in a new Germany, and it is natural that people should ask whether the spirit of that new regime will be felt in this once obscure but now world-famous village. The Passion plays have been given during three centuries in which Germany has been alternately invader and invaded, has been subjected to the influence of liberal ideas and has known the domination of reactionary forces. The fact that the Oberammergau presentations have survived testifies to the integrity of the villagers who have dedicated themselves to the work of presenting the impressive spectacle which in recent years has attracted spectators from all parts of the world.

Inevitably the modern spirit of commercialism has had its effect upon Oberammergau as it has upon most of the institutions of the present day. Only those who live in isolation from the world of men can expect to escape that influence. Similarly, it is impossible to believe that Oberammergau and its players will not be affected to some extent by Germany's latest revolution, as they must have been by earlier ones.

Reports have already been received hinting that the performance this year will be more heroic and more virile than usual. However, those who know the war record of the man who played the role of Christus four years ago and on this occasion would expect his performance to be characterized by force and vigor. After all, the record of 300 years is an impressive testimony to the steadfastness of the inhabitants of this small Bavarian village. That testimony makes it difficult to believe that the current production of the Passion play will be affected in any essential respect by the changed political environment in which it is given.

Municipal Center Changes.

Modification of the Municipal Center plan in the interests of economy will cause little or no regret among citizens of the District. It is important, of course, that the District government should be housed in quarters in keeping with the dignity of the National Capital. But this objective may be achieved without making such an enormous outlay as the Park and Planning Commission formerly contemplated.

The modified plan is more in line with the views of local officials. As originally planned the Municipal Center was a rather modest project estimated to cost $11,000,000. It was Congress that insisted upon a more ambitious undertaking. The whole problem was removed from the hands of local authorities. When the Park and Planning Commission had completed its plan for a municipal center that would harmonize with the elaborate structures which the Federal Government is erecting south of Pennsylvania avenue the estimated cost to local taxpayers was virtually doubled.

In recent years Congress has sharply reduced the Federal contribution toward maintenance and development of the Capital City. Under these conditions it would be impracticable to go forward with the costy municipal center plan. The chief question which now arises is whether the Park and Planning Commission has been able to modify its previous plans sufficiently to avoid the imposition of too heavy a burden upon District taxpayers.

Tydings Of Good Cheer.

Senator Tydings' interview published in The Post yesterday offers encouraging evidence that some members of Congress are studying current problems in the light of basic principles. Too much glib support of panaceas, experiments and legislative cure-alls has come from Capitol Hill. By contrast it is the more refreshing to hear a Senator talk as thoughtfully as does Mr. Tydings of the country's underlying problems.

While a strong supporter of the Administration, Senator Tydings is frankly apprehensive over its persistent resort to "temporary expedients" and its reckless spending policy. Apparently he has no faith in the continued imposition of one emergency program after another. Instead of over-advertised and unexplored short-cuts, he is more concerned with the basic adjustments necessary to permit a normal flow of capital and trade. His chief interest is in stabilization of currencies, modification of tariff barriers, elimination of the war-debts mess and international disarmament. "Each nation," he says, "will have to accept sacrifices, but the ultimate rewards would more than compensate each one of them."

The Maryland Senator is one of the most consistent advocates of sound fiscal policy in Congress. His calculation that 40 per cent of the people in this country are drawing their pay, in whole or in part, from the Government is cause for serious consideration. When so stanch a supporter of the President says that "reckless spending with no consideration of where the money is coming from" is certainly not the way to restore equilibrium, the time for retrenchment would seem at last to be at hand.

Senator Tydings thinks the sales tax, with food, cheap clothing and medicine exempt, will be essential to pay the costs of the New Deal. At present consumers are paying concealed sales taxes levied by the AAA on food and clothing, while less essential commodities remain exempt. By pointing out inconsistencies of this type and renouncing expediences that "drive out the big point of view" Senator Tydings is performing a most useful service to his party and to the Nation.

The Stamp Of Merit.

Elated by the "success" of his Mother's Day adventure in philately, the Postmaster General announces plans for a Santa Claus stamp. Whistler's famous painting having been safely commandeered, distorted and handed over for further punishment by a thousand cancelling-machines, St. Nicholas is to have his turn next.

Stamp, stamp, stamp, the boys are marching! It is idle to imagine jovial Mr. Farley posing, in traditional whiskers, for this new picture, although he is physically—and, we believe, temperamentally—suited for the job. He will more likely prefer a likeness of the original St. Nicholas, the Bishop of Myra. So we warn him that the real bishop was as much a man of action as Whistler was a man of words.

Whistler punished his detractors by barbed phrases only; the patron of children tore down a heathen temple on which no other human being durst lay hands, and, writes Simeon Metaphrastes, its "demons were heard roaring and yelling because they were forcibly evicted." Caustic Whistler, being deceased, uttered never a complaint against the Postoffice Department; but, dead, the generally gentle St. Nicholas detected the devil disguised as a woman on the pilgrim-ship—and had him thrown to the waves.

Mr. Farley says the purpose of the proposed stamp is "to commemorate Christmas." Does he feel that this festival is so fallen into disregard as to need postal commemoration? If so, we hope that he has no similar views upon Good Friday.

Mile Posts

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

DEMANDS BY organized labor for a provision in forthcoming antitrust legislation which would have practically legalized strikes and boycotts were rejected by the Democratic members of the House Judiciary Committee. Both sides "stood pat" as the conference broke up.

G. HOWELL PARR, described as a "prominent club and society man," made a wager of $750 with several other clubmen that he could roll over country roads a distance of two miles without arising from the ground. A Philadelphia clubman promised $5,000 more if Parr completed the feat. After taking hours to roll a half mile, he slept for a while, but was determined to complete the arduous feat. Hundreds of persons watched the amazing nonsense, and cheered and jeered.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

DONNING UNIFORMS, unfolding gold embroidered flags and goose-stepping to the tune of brass bands was prohibited in Germany as an interallied note protesting against militaristic demonstrations arrived in Berlin.

THE SOLDIERS' BONUS bill, which had been the subject of a fight between Congress and two successive Presidents, was repassed by the Senate over President Coolidge's veto by a vote of 59 to 26, two votes more than the necessary two-thirds, thus making it law.

NEW YORK AVENUE, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, was the scene of a loud blast that hurled six manholes more than 20 feet in the air. Though many people were in the vicinity, on their way to church, none was injured.

Crack Down on Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Crime conditions in the United States are a disgrace to our Government and would be to any one of the smaller nations. We sent Marines to Central America. Why not use this force in our own country to settle the most despicable conditions and end organized crime—the worst ever existing in a civilized Christian land?

The United States is said to be the leading nation of the world today, and yet a group of criminals daily demand and receive tribute. The details of the two glaring cases—the Lindbergh and the Robles—strike horror to the hearts of all parents.

It has been demonstrated the Attorney General's department is not equal to the job, not from lack of effort, but because of the laws or lack of them, because of technicalities, delays in Congress, and because of the lack of men and instruments of force to match these gangsters at their own game. The fact that one man, aided by a group of criminals, could and has, for months defied the Government, the police and every form of civil and National Government is a disgrace.

For a year many things have been done by the Administration for which there was no right in law or the Constitution but that of an emergency, and the people have stood back of the Administration. Is this condition not an emergency and a grave one? Are citizens and mothers to continue to suffer? Is no one to be safe? Are little children not to be safe from these beasts of prey? Why not "crack down" on this business, this industry? Let us have a little sentiment, patience, idealism and more common sense and more "Teddy" in handling this intolerable situation.

"Dumb Voters" to Blame.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see from a front-page story in The Post that the reason for the great increase in fatalities in connection with automobile accidents is "a mystery" and that some official attributes it to "dumb drivers." It should be attributed to dumb voters.

It has taken a very few months of repeal to make it perfectly evident that life in America will not be safe until we adopt a very different attitude toward the sale and consumption of intoxicants. It is not the man who is drunk who is a peril; it is the man who has had just enough liquor to have his judgment of distance and time seriously affected.

Common observation only is needed to establish the fact that a very serious situation has developed. Many people are becoming afraid to drive their cars, particularly after night falls.

In my opinion the American people within 12 months will be demanding that we have prohibition again with a few real men on the side to enforce it. Present conditions are intolerable.

Potomac Coin Tossing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding your article in The Post of May 11 on Gen. George Washington:

Please pass along to Author Bloom and Representative Bloom that the story of Gen. Washington throwing a silver dollar across the Potomac River was true and was a very simple and positive accomplishment on the day Gen. Washington did the coin tossing.

The Potomac River that day was frozen over with ice from the Virginia bank to the Maryland bank of the river and Gen. Washington stood on the bank at Mount Vernon and tossed a silver dollar which sailed across on top of the ice and landed on the Maryland shore at Marshall Hall—quite a possible feat. I have never heard anyone claim that Gen. Washington did the feat when the river was frozen over. Anyone could do the same thing today if it were possible to catch the river frozen over as it was at that time.

"A Sad Disappointment."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All lovers of English literature are indebted to you for the daily articles of William Lyon Phelps. Personally, I preserve them. But the article of May 11 on James Whitcomb Riley was certainly a sad disappointment to his many lovers, of which I am one. Riley is preeminent as the interpreter of the heart of the common people. "Knee Deep in June," "Out to Old Aunt Mary's," "The Old Swimming Hole," "Little Orphant Annie," "Don't Cry Little Boy" and "Good-bye, Jim, Take Keer of Yourself," with many other poems, have won him a place which none can contest. He is probably the best loved of American poets.

We think that Mr. Phelps owes it to himself to present a treatment more worthy both of himself and the poet. There is nothing in this article that excites a desire to read the works of the writer, which is so apparent in other articles.

"Rotten to the Core."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like a good American "seeing Paris," I took in the "movies" on a recent vacation. I am ashamed to be seen at them in my own town.

I found them rotten to the core: a succession of scenes of women smoking, drinking, painting themselves, and doing worse; scenes of fast life and criminal life; eye-blinding light flicker, deafening noises, hectic excitement; men and women rushing and dancing about, and howling like dervishes; loud, coarse, slangy, vulgar speech with double meanings; gross materialism unrelieved by any touch of spirituality or refinement; and frequent scenes, or rather obscenes, of nearly nude women and lewd gestures.

And I saw what grieved me to the heart: children, unchaperoned laughing at nasty words and scenes.

CHARLES HOOPER.

Frank and Friendly.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I commend the attitude of your editorials in the issue of May 7, on "Hysteria No Cure," and particularly on "In Perspective." But I had to read the second deliverance twice before I got the gist of it. By interpretation the writer means to say we have been short-sighted, local in our viewpoint, suggesting impracticable things, and have brought our country much embarrassment by our past attitude to the war debts.

Long ago, this should have been said. But since it is now said, may I, in commending The Post's fine sense in our modern muddles, also ask that editorials be written in less of Latinized style. There is no need to copy Al Smith's slang, but a modern editor may well copy his directness and simplicity in expression. Editors need not write a la Mencken, yet everybody reads what Mencken says, because they understand what he is driving at. It's too bad that such fine editorials as The Post gives us should be so often covered up in such "linked sweetness long drawn out" language. Your editorials need not scream in capital letters, after the manner of some modern papers, but let your readers have what you say in language which even this writer can understand without having to go over it several times.

"Nats" or Senators?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Someone asked me recently who it was that started the fashion of calling our baseball team the Nationals or, worse yet, the "Nats."

It does seem strange that an American League team, even in Washington, would wish to adopt the name of their rival league and the absurdity of the name was shown up during the last world series when the radio announcers and others were obliged to call the team the Washingtons or the Senators as the New Yorks were really the Nationals.

Why not do away with this "Nat" business and call the team by its old name, the Senators? This has been associated with all the Washington teams of past years and is certainly more appropriate.

Man's Inhumanity to Man.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The NRA, shrewd as it is, seems amateurish when compared with the Hoover Administration. The NRA should be today a discredited activity, recognized as illegal, and socially undesirable. So sternly, indeed, does the voice of the American people cry out against wanton cruelty that it is difficult for us to understand how the NRA can play such a sustaining role in the United States.

The peculiar psychology of the NRA can not be rationally comprehended or explained by anyone; it is a mixture of ignorance and fanaticism that will fortunately disappear from the face of the earth. It has furnished us with the grossest evidence of man's inhumanity to man. LEONARD L. BEAVER.

Washington in Moscow.

A letter written by George Washington in 1785 to an unidentified correspondent concerning the navigation of the Mississippi River, just brought to light in the Moscow Historical Museum, indicates that the father of his country knew how to turn a soft answer and yet visioned the manifest destiny of the Nation. Referring to complaints that Western settlers were defying the order of the Court of Spain closing to them the navigation of the river, Washington called attention to the astonishingly great emigration and pointed out that the settlers were "not very subordinate to law" and that it would be difficult "to restrain those people from using natural advantages." Washington knew his pioneer.

There is no end of history foreshadowed in this ancient letter—the Aaron Burr fiasco of a Mississippi empire; the first agrarian conflict between the rapidly growing West and the Atlantic seaboard (history is repeating itself in the St. Lawrence); various movements of the Kentucky and Ohio settlers to "capture" the river to avoid heavy imposts for their tobacco, flour, bacon and hams; the long battle between the Federalists and the Republicans (Jeffersonians) in which the parties took opposite positions when in and out of office over the issue of force or diplomacy toward the Father of Waters; the passage of the Louisiana territory from Spain to France by the treaty of San Ildefonso; Jefferson's threat to break with France and form an alliance with England unless the mouth of the river and a deposit site for products was ceded to the States.

Finally came Napoleon's offer to sell the whole Louisiana domain to the United States for $15,000,000. This shook Jefferson's constitutionalism to the very foundations. However, after Monroe had dumped the signed papers in his lap, Jefferson's practical sense prevailed over his strict constructionist scruples and on October 20, 1803, he concluded this step in the course of the manifest destiny which Washington had foreseen about a people "not too subordinate to law," who are "difficult to restrain from the use of natural advantages."

The Post Impressionist

Those "Ten Best Novels."

Postoffice, Saturday.

EDWARD PEALE'S choice of "the ten best novels by American authors now deceased," which we whispered in April, produced immediate denunciation by word of mouth. But only now has a written retort reached us. It is Roland Grove's, and "Roland Grove," as you may be aware, is the pseudonym employed by a not-unknown poet when he criticizes any literature except his own.

Here was Mr. Peale's list: "The House of Seven Gables" (Hawthorne), "Moby Dick" (Melville), "Last of the Mohicans" (Cooper), "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" (Mark Twain), "The Awkward Age" (Henry James), "The Portion of Labor" (Mary Wilkins) "Checkers" (Blossom), "Rudder Grange" (Stockton), "The Orphan Angel" (Elinor Wiley).

Mr. Grove seems to think we approved this. We merely passed it along. Thus do we daily demonstrate our open-mindedness upon most subjects. And, to show it again upon the present subject, we herewith reproduce most of the counterblast.

* * *

"I turn my thumb down for old Hawthorne," says Mr. Grove. "He wrote dreary tales of what would today be called psychoanalysis without understanding it any better than the people who write about it today. He affected a silky kind of style that went treacherously slipping along under your feet until, though it didn't move rapidly, you had to run as on a treadmill if you wanted to keep up with it."

* * *

Mr. Grove has no patience at all with Mr. Peale's ideals of American humor. This critic's critic complains that Mr. Peale, in praising "Checkers," lauded "a bit of long-forgotten slangy impudence" and omitted the superior Ring Lardner. "Mark Twain is entitled to a place," writes Mr. Grove, "but it's ridiculous to give him two entries. If style is to be considered, who ever had a better than Thomas Bailey Aldrich? So suppose we transfer to him one of the Clemens entries and split the other, giving a half-place to that comic masterpiece, Charles Dudley Warner's 'Almighty Dollar.'

* * *

"I suppose Cooper will have to be let in, but he should be admitted because of 'The Pilot' and 'The Spy' rather than for the 'Leather-stocking Tales.'

"Nor does Holmes receive fair treatment by Mr. Peale, who regrets that 'The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table' is 'not a novel' and then admits Frank Stockton's 'Rudder Grange'—as if it were one. Why should Holmes' 'Elsie Venner' be left in the cold? Where is a finer story of the startling sort than this of the snake-girl among the Boston Brahmins?"

* * *

Indeed, Mr. Grove seems to set as high a value upon the "startling" element in novels as Victor Hugo set thereon. Our modern, if you please, believes that one of the ten best American novels is a novelette as to quantity and a trick thriller as to quality: "In the Fog," by Richard Harding Davis!

* * *

"Length," Mr. Grove goes on, "can scarcely be called necessary to a novel. There is almost my only point of agreement with Peale. And, since we feel thus, we should remember John Mitchell. His 'Amos Judd' is nothing less than a first-class work of art. So is even his 'Pines of Lory.' And pre-eminently so is that story of his called 'The Villa Aurora'—Villa Something—Italian at any rate, with its grand theme about a group of nineteenth century people getting drunk on wine laid down by Roman Horace. . . .

* * *

"By including Mary Wilkins and omitting Constance Fenimore Woolson and 'Charles Egbert Craddock,' Mr. Peale's list commits one more injustice, this time to American women-novelists of the past. How can a list of good American novels be American when it omits the first of our baseball novels, a best-seller in the days before best-sellers and a fascinating little tale—'One Summer,' by Blanche Willis Howard?

* * *

"Perhaps," Mr. Grove naively continues, "I ought to pause here and count my own list, but, if I do that I might find that I had exceeded the prescribed limit of ten titles, and I shouldn't be able to plead for G. W. Cable and 'Jupiter Lights,'—not to mention 'Agnes Surriage,' which ought to be known by all the admirers of living Witter Bynner's verse because it was written by Witter Bynner's uncle. Besides, imitating The Post Impressionist, I want to end with something that will make the Column's readers jump—in fact, with two somethings.

* * *

"'Little Women' is one of the best ten novels written by Americans 'now deceased,' and its record rivals 'Moby Dick.' The whale story was popular shortly before the Civil War, then was utterly forgotten for some decades, and finally returned to a popularity equal to its first—greater, in one sense, for our sensitive modern critics insist that its fame at the time of publication was factitious, and that people of the middle eighteen hundreds could not really appreciate a good book as we can nowadays. 'Little Women,' I daresay, never altogether lost its vogue, but that vogue was principally among the young, until the movies did one good piece of propaganda for culture.

* * *

"And now to end. Mr. Peale has entirely omitted the completest novelist this country has yet produced. Yes, sir, I mean William Dean Howells. He is out of fashion? So once was Shakespeare. But he will come in again, as surely as Shakespeare did. At the head of any list of the best American novels ought to stand 'The Rise of Silas Lapham,' or 'The Lady of the Aroostook,' or 'The Landlord of Lion's Head.'"

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

I'LL bet Mr. W. Kingsland Macy is back in Neew York telling his friends that down in Washington there are just about the dumbest people he ever saw. No matter how pointed you make a thing, somehow it does not seem to penetrate their thick skulls. I won't go this far with the gentleman, but it does seem that on the occasion of his recent visit in our midst there was a conspiracy to appear very dumb, indeed.

Mr. Macy came down and out of a clear sky said what the Republicans needed to do was to rally around a man like Justice Harlan F. Stone. There was the man, said Mr. Macy, to lead the G. P. O. out of the wilderness.

BARGERON.

Now, it is not that this suggestion of Mr. Macy's did not attract considerable attention. It was kept on the front pages for two or three days. The justice's qualifications were most favorably and sympathetically analyzed. No question about it, he was an ideal man. Of course, he might not want to leave the Supreme Court for the hazards of a Presidential campaign, but this was certainly a crackerjack idea that Mr. Macy had.

• • • •

Mr. Macy's disappointment could not be with the reception of his idea about Mr. Stone at all. It is with the fact that it stopped there—the reception, the discussion, everything. Not beyond Mr. Stone did it go. This could not have been as Mr. Macy wished.

Just why it was this way, I can't explain. Why, at some time in the discussion didn't someone say that the man who gave birth to this brilliant idea about Mr. Stone should be considered for National chairman. There is where I think there must have been a conspiracy of dumbness against Mr. Macy.

Here was the man down from New York with a corking idea. Nowhere was it beaten down, nowhere was it belittled. Every Republican Senator agrees that, as ideas come and go, here was about as good one as a man had had in long time. Some of them, in fact most of them, pointed out that the Presidential campaign was a long time off and there was no need of getting disturbed one way or the other about it just now.

But no one of them thought of the question that is pressing the party, the question of a National chairman, and the fitness of Mr. Macy for the job.

Yet nothing would have been more logical than that discussion of Mr. Macy in this vein should have followed immediately or gone hand in hand with the discussion about Mr. Stone.

What would be more natural than after Mr. Macy had given such a perfect example of what he thought the Republican leadership should be, at least someone would get the thought that Mr. Macy typified this leadership in a subordinate or National chairmanship way? If he looks upon Mr. Stone as exemplifying the new Republican party it would seem to follow that this is the way he would seek to lead his party if given the chance.

This is really what Mr. Macy had in mind. In a very clever and modest way, he was saying just what kind of a man was he.

• • • •

He knew that nothing would come in a Presidential way from the projection of Justice Stone's name. What he manifestly wanted and what he had reason to expect was the focusing of attention upon him as the National chairman. It was, I think, a very clever bid for the job, a nice, smooth, refined asking for the thing.

Apparently, though, it was too much so, too clever and too refined. It didn't make a dent in our skulls.

It may be that Mr. Macy caught us on our off days when our noodles were not registering as well as they should, when we were not on our mettle for subtleties. Anyway this little play went either way over or around our heads. It didn't go in. Undoubtedly Mr. Macy thinks we are dumb.

Virginia's Sons In Hall of Fame

U. S. Accepts Washington and Lee Statues After 25 Years.

(Associated Press.)

Virginia received the Nation's belated thanks last night for giving Washington and Lee to the Hall of Fame.

Bronze statues of the two famous sons of the Old Dominion were banked with flowers and the men they portrayed eulogized—with Congressional sanction—after 25 years' delay.

Contrasted with House flood debate on whether Lee should be given National recognition—the stumbling block to official acknowledgment—were the words of Senator Walsh, Massachusetts Democrat, who received the statues as "the delegate of Congress."

Acceptance of the Lee statue, he said, "is in the nature of a final attestation of the entire extinguishment of the passions which once divided our country and set brother against brother, and which lingered long after all arms had been laid down."

"The animosities engendered by the Civil War have long since been obliterated," he added.

Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia, in offering the statues, said a review of the roster of Virginia's illustrious sons "brings us unerringly back to two."

626 Veterans Stage Parade, Sing for Bonus

Roosevelt Requests House Group Study of Legislation.

"Hail, hail, the vets are here,
"We demand our bonus,
"We demand our bonus——"

Chanting a parody in uneven voices and moving in straggling lines, clad in khaki, mufti and ragged odds and ends, 626 veterans of the World War, representing the National Veterans' Rank and File, moved jerkily in Washington's second bonus parade yesterday. Their review was a mere ghost of the bonus march of 1932.

The marchers formed a line which consisted, in addition to them, of two buglers, five women, two dogs, five automobiles and one child, who bore a placard which demanded: "Give my Daddy his bonus."

Although most of the men in the parade were clad in civilian clothes, tattered faded khaki and bleached fatigue caps blended with the motley of browns, grays and blues.

An escort of 12 motorcycle policemen, under the supervision of Inspector B. A. Lamb, of the Traffic Bureau, and Inspector Albert Headley, buzzed alongside.

Bearing his placard, demanding manding his father's "bonus," the child—a boy of 12—was in the front rank, followed by the Army's leaders, the Committee of Three. The executive committee of 11 followed, and then came the buglers.

The parade began at Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, proceeded down Pennsylvania avenue to Seventeenth street, up Seventeenth street to Connecticut avenue, thn to Fifteenth street over E street to Pennsylvania avenue. Then the marchers went to the Peace Monument, and next skirted the grounds of the Capitol, walking past the Senate and House Office Buildings. Hundreds of spectators lined the curb, but there was no applause.

Then, disbanding at their starting point, they were whisked to Fort Hunt, Va.

MMeanwhile, President Roosevelt sent a request to Chairman Allard H. Gasque of the House Pensions Committee to have the committee review pending veterans' legislation. Frank T. Hines, head of the Veterans Bureau, conferred with Mr. Roosevelt, but did not decide whether to recommend an omnibus veterans' bill.

The Great Northern Paper Towel Corporation announces an issue of 50,000 additional shares of common stock. Great Northern Paper Towel Corporation has 1,500,000 shares outstanding. No dividends have been paid and the chances look as bleak as ever. The corporation has lost money consistently since its incorporation in 1891. Nobody has ever been able to total its indebtedness.

Its president is Luke P. Peregillis, who spends all the company's time trying to correct a hook. The general manager of the plant is V. P. X. Cuttysark, a retired horseshoe pitching champion. This stock is being offered to the public at $50 a share. The underwriters have bought it at $4 a bale. Don't say we didn't warn you.

• • • •

The J. Whattlesnorf Hoe Handle Co. announces an immediate need of about $400,000 to replace a pretty adequate plant with something twice too big for it, including twelve putting greens for directors. This sum is to be raised by issuing 50,000 shares of preferred B printed on gloss paper in three colors. After a careful study of the fines and sentences under the new securities act, the officers of the company have decided to make no statements relative to the company's past, present or future. All the directors can promise investors is their best wishes and lots of fun.

• • • •

The Presto Salad Knife Corporation, one of the country's largest makers of unsalable salad knives, wishes to announce the withdrawal of its proposed flotation of 100,000 shares of debentures of 1987. Reason: Definite warning from the Administration at Washington that the maximum penalties will be invoked. So sorry.

The American Pistachio Nut Cracking Co., Inc., after a six-weeks' debate with Government agents, has decided to go ahead with its advertised issue of 75,000 shares of common, Class B nonvoting stock. The company insists that it is in a fair condition, doing a good business and facing a prosperous future. The Government insists that it is practically bankrupt, with no future outside of Buszby's Dream Book.

The directors, under the rule permitting such action in case of a tie, have put the decision up to their lawyer, who says go ahead and issue the stock.

Another Letter From a Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My dear Louise: Since you have a red-head's natural capacity for temper, every contact with disagreeable people must tempt you to engage in vocal battle.

I hope you never will do it, no matter how sorely you are tried, for there is nothing at all to gain and everything to lose.

It may not seem vulgar when a dignified queen uses blistering words to reprove a menial, for the menial listens in fear and trembling and doesn't answer back.

But that doesn't happen in a land of theoretical equality. Here you get as good as you give. To use hard words is to invite words of the same kind.

Because that is true, your sex has unwittingly developed a code for its guidance in time of anger, and each individual behaves in a manner peculiar to her class.

This is so universally true that neither rags nor riches, nor makeup nor finery can conceal a woman's true class when her temper is aroused.

In and near society's gutter, enraged women curse one another with the eloquence of mule drivers and even resort to hair pulling and scratching.

In the class above these, women who normally behave well are unmasked by anger. They exchange insults that cut to the marrow. And thereafter they snub one another in public and talk about one another and bore their mutual friends with oft-told testimony of evil to justify their malice.

But women of breeding and refinement, however furious they may be, still observe the amenities and in public conceal all trace of their feeling.

The purpose of good manners at table is to avoid any gross or vulgar business that would spoil the appetite of fellow diners.

And it is a similar regard for others—an unwillingness to shame and embarrass the innocent by washing dirty linen in public—that prompts women of good breeding to keep their poise in spite of fury.

All men on a sinking ship are frightened; but fright shames mankind, so the manlier ones conceal it. Love, DAD.

One-Time Virginia Slave Celebrates 109th Anniversary

Upperville, Va., May 18 (Spl.).—"Aunt" Margaret Williams, former slave in the family of the late Benjamin Franklin Carter, who owned an estate near Mountsville, Loudoun County, today celebrated her 109th birthday.

"Aunt" Margaret was born on the Carter estate and lived there until the close of the Civil War. After obtaining her freedom she remained in that section.

Pageant Players Seek Carroll Kin In Tercentenary

Westminster, Md., May 18 (Spl.). The Westminster Players are searching for a lineal descendant of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, to represent his famous ancestor in the tercentenary pageant, "St. Maries, the Mother of Maryland," to be given at St. Marys City June 15 to 16, it was learned today.

The Rev. Miles F. Reifsnyder, president of the Players, stated that according to the Maryland Historical Society, Charles Carroll was of slight build, medium height, had gray-blue eyes, high forehead and rather sharp features. The description is based on portraits.

According to Miss Dorothy Elderdice, director of Carroll County's part in the pageant, a person will be chosen for the part at the next meeting of the Players at Western Maryland College Tuesday at 8 p. m.

It was pointed out that because Charles Carroll lived to be an old man, any person between the ages of 17 and 70 would be eligible.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Best Sellers and Best Writers.

Mr. Edward Weeks has prepared for the Institute of Arts and Science a list of the 65 best sellers since 1875. This is a valuable service and the results are certainly suggestive. Those who imagine that "bad" books have a great circulation should study this list; there is not a single book in the row of best sellers which could possibly exert an immoral influence on even the most susceptible; the only objection to some of these books is that they are so sentimental that they might produce softening of the brain.

Many books that are filled with improprieties or passages that are objectionable have a temporary notoriety, but they seldom have a large sale. It is therefore inadvisable for those who dislike them either publicly to condemn them or to ask for their suppression. Suppression always increases the circulation.

The late Paul Cohen-Portheim, the Austrian artist, said that sentimentality in motion pictures and in books and songs was a sign of good health in the people; a much better sign than cynicism or oversophistication.

The book that has had the largest sale in America in the last 60 years is "In His Steps," by the Rev. Charles Sheldon (who is still preaching every Sunday), of which 8,000,000 copies have been sold. As the publishers assign five readers to every copy sold of any book, at least 40,000,000 persons have read this religious work.

A curious and certainly unexpected feature of this investigation is the fact that not a single book produced since the war, not one, has had a sale of over 1,000,000 copies; whereas from 1875 to 1914 20 books reached that figure in actual sales.

As might be expected, the late Gene Stratton Porter and the living Harold Bell Wright produced a number of novels enjoying sales of more than 2,000,000 each. "The Rosary," by Florence Barclay, has sold very nearly a million. Among the better class of best sellers which have had enormous sales are "Ben Hur," "The Virginian," "The Call of the Wild," "David Harum," "Trilby," "The Sea Wolf," "Richard Carvel," "Main Street," "Penrod," "Looking Backward," "Of Human Bondage," "Beau Geste," and others.

Among books, not novels, that have a conspicuous place in the list are "The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells; "We," by Charles Lindbergh; "The Story of Philosophy," by Will Durant; "America's Part in the World War," by Beamish and March.

In 1930, Mr. Weeks says, the Rev. Mr. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," disclosed that because of a flaw in his copyright he had never received royalties on his books."

Jamestown Island Joins Government Holdings.

Norfolk, Va., May 18 (Spl.).—Jamestown Island today became the property of the United States Government.

A check for $165,000 was paid to Mrs. Louis J. Barney, of Dayton, Ohio, who owned more than 1,700 acres that the Government needed to add to property occupied by the Colonial National Monument.

The Government acquired the property through condemnation proceedings, recently concluded in the Federal District Court here. Mrs. Barney set a price of $500,000 for the property, which was considered exorbitant, and the Government put the case before a jury to name the price.

The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities owns a small piece of land on the island which marks a memorial erected in honor of first permanent English settlement established there 327 years ago. The State of Virginia contributed $85,000 toward the purchase price of the Barney property, the remainder, $80,000, being Federal funds.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

IT'S very seldom indeed that I would recommend a scholar's thesis for wide reading. And when Cyrus H. Karraker, of Bucknell University, began his research into the Seventeenth Century "prerogative revenues of the Crown in the New World," a casual bystandr might be forgiven for moving on to something more lively.

But that first glance would miss a great deal. For to the Crown belonged an income from "unclaimed goods, such as wreck, flotsam, jetsam, lagan, and goods derelict, treasure-trove, royal fish, ambergris, and strays and waifs, the forfeitures of felons, outlaws, suicides, deodands, &c."

THEO. HALL.

Out of all these quaint and curious rights, Mr. Karraker chose to investigate treasure-trove, ambergris, and wreck. Working away at old records, he uncovered a story of Spanish treasure galleons and swash-buckling treasure hunters which outdoes fiction. "The Hispaniola Treasure" (University of Pennsylvania Press, $2) will please the historical expert, I dare say. But I am far more sure that its strange lore and vivid excitement will delight the lay reader.

• • • •

In 1642, on a reef somewhere northeast of Hispaniola in the West Indies, the richest laden ship of a Spanish treasure fleet went down with all her cargo. Time and again expeditions sailed to find it—Capt. Edward Stanley, of the Royal Navy, leading a famous one in 1683.

But it was not until William Phipps, an "ambitious, courageous, vane, blustering, profane" sea captain, took his second expedition to the Bahama Banks in the winter of 1686-87 that the treasure was found. Several of his men, it seems, had left the smaller of his two ships and were rowing along a reef. Empty handed, they were turning back when one of them saw a "sea-feather," an especially lovely kind of sea weed, growing up through the water. He htought he might at least take that back to his captain as a souvenir. So a diver was sent down to cut the stem.

But in a moment up he came with the astounding news that a cannon lay there on the bottom six or eight fathoms below. A "sow" of silver (oblong casting larger than a "pig") was discovered, and then the men knew they had reached their goal.

You can imagine the excitement when the expedition got down to work. It was a bad day when only "3,913 dollars and 1,500 half dollars" were recovered. All told, Phipps and his men salvaged 200,000 pounds worth of silver and gold, not counting the jewels.

When the got back to England, James II received his lawful tenth share, the Duke of Albemarle (chief stockholder) his quarter, and Phipps his sixteenth. But small as that latter was (a mere 12,000 pounds), Phipps had other compensation. For he became at once the hero of England, he was knighted by the King, and from that time on his fortunes rose until he became Governor of Massachusetts.

Of all thees expeditions, Mr. Karraker writes briefly and well. If you are accustomed to the run of historical romance, you may think the book a bit dry. But it is a relief not to wade through an ocean of 'gadzooks" and "by my halidoms" in order to come to real men and stirring events.

The Press has made of it all a very tidy little volume, with contemporary charts and pictures of old diving bells. The 1775 map on the end papers is particularly interesting. Will some scholar kindly tell me why the charts of the time are criss-crossed with handsome, but to my eye entirely irrelevant, straight lines?

I must apologize for an error in Thursday's column. Rambling on about my week-end (and writing the piece on the train down from New York), I got but one word right in the title of Hoffman Nickerson's study of war. The correct title is "Can We Limit War?"

"Must We Have War?" which, I think a far better title anyway, belongs to a little book (Bruce Humphries, Boston, $2.50) by Ascher Henkin—a book I find remarkably fresh and vigorous on that ticklish subject.

Among his suggestions are these A compulsory military service must be abolished; citizens who go or send money into a foreign country must not call upon their own nation to defend their rights; an advisory Commissio for Peace should be directly elected in each country as an expression of the people's will to international amity; war profits should be taxed more than 100 per cent, "as a constant warning to the business community that war can have nothing but a damaging effect upon their earnings."

He sees no possibility of a World State, but instead, he shows how effective would be an International Economic Council. Mr. Henkin has written one of the distinctly better books in its field.

• • • •

To go back to the subject of mistakes in this column—and when I think of the possibilities I wake up shivering in the night—I want to thank a person of name unknown who signed his postcard, "From good old 'Constant Reader.'"

It seems that a while back I wrote the phrase, "Almost, O Caesar, thou persuadest me" Now my correspondent reminds me that Acts 26:28—"Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian"—holds scant basis for my phrase.

What I want to know is how Caesar got into the woodpile. I'm pretty sure I didn't make it up.

Housing Bill Is Indorsed By C. of C. Head

Doubt Growing, However, That Measure Will Get Through.

(Associated Press.)

Henry I. Harriman, president of of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, yesterday urged enactment of the Administration's housing bill, while doubt grew among some Senate leaders that the bill would get through at this session.

They—and House leaders also—said they had not been informed that the proposal designed to attract billions in private capital into home building and modernization was on the "must" list before adjournment.

It was added, however, that Mr. Roosevelt would like to see the program made law before Congress quits, but that appaently he would sacrifice it if the plan threatened to prolong adjournment.

Discussing the aims of the proposal before the Senate Banking Committee, Harriman said the Nation was "suffering primarily" from lack of employment in the durable goods and construction industries.

Calls For U. S. Guarantee.

The housing program was drawn with these industries in mind. Its essentials are a Government guarantee up to 20 per cent of loans for home modernization and repair; insurance up to 80 per cent of mortgages for new building and guarantee up to $2,500 of deposits in building and loan associations and similar institutions."

"This measure," Harriman said, "is one of the most important presented for your consideration. It attempts to give the necessary encouragement to private capital to go into the construction of homes."

The Senate Banking Committee has been holding hearings since early in the week and the House Banking Committee yesterday also began consideration of the program. Witnesses who have previously testified before the Senate group were called.

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, commented during Harriman's testimony that some assurance of continued income to workingmen and others who might buy and repair homes seemed necessary to insure the success of the housing plan.

Insurance Needed.

Harriman said that was true, but such assurance was difficult to obtain. He agreed with the Michigan Senator upon the necessity of some form of unemployment insurance.

Frank Watson, Reconstruction Corporation attorney, estimated that the total interest cost to the man who builds a new home under the plan would be 9 per cent.

Passage of the pending bill was urged by John R. Fuzgard, of Evanston, Ill., vice president of the National Association for Better Housing.

Edward J. Russell, of St. Louis, president of the American Institute of Architects, said the construction industry was badly in need of help.

This Blunder Has a Lesson

Wedding Party Went Askew When Bridesmaids Erred; The Story of Unreadiness Has a Meaning for Life Today.

By William T. Ellis.

Weddings and funerals mean much in the Orient. Even the poorest manage a celebration for these events. I recall a wedding that I once attended on the northern shore of the Lake of Galilee. The Arabs there are pitiably poor. Nevertheless, they held high festivities, friends and kindred coming from a distance to participate, and the gala doings, with music and dancing and feasting, lasted far into the night—at least, they were still going on when I fell asleep. I had seen the little bride, who came out of her tent to greet Father Toepper's foreign guest. The twinkling eyed old monk said to me, "Look at her, dressed like a princess. And tomorrow she will be doing the work of a donkey." But the bride was having the high hour of her life; tomorrow's toil could be forgotten.

That deep, racial sense, which is so strong in the Orient, perceives the vital significance of a wedding, and magnifies it. For marriage represents the continuous on-going of life; the stability of organized society; and therefore it is befittingly celebrated as a matter of community concern. What a slump from this wise usage is the way of modern couples who sneak off to a justice of the peace, for a secret performance of the most sacred and important event in two young persons' lives! Let us have in mind the stately setting of the event which Jesus used as a parable of the wise and foolish virgins.

Picturing the End.

This story was told in the temple area by Jesus on one of the last days of His life. His friends had been pointing out to Him the glories of the Temple; and He had responded that the time was coming—it arrived in the year 70—when not one stone would be left standing upon another From that point the Teacher proceeded, in grim and awesome words, to portray the end of the world, and the return of the Son of Man in judgment. He made clear, by most explicit declarations, that of the time of that great day and hour no man could know. Many of us who cherish the blessed hope of His return strangely ignore these words of the Master.

Myriads of Pre-millenialists insist upon seeing in the present many portents of Christ's coming. The other day I read an editorial by a friend wherein he strongly suggested that the year of 1934 would witness this supreme event. I marveled that he could so flatly disregard our Lord's emphatic teaching that the great day could not be known in advance by anybody.

Upon this point Jesus dwelt in His portrayal of a wedding, with ten waiting bridesmaids, five of whom kept their lamps filled and ready—we should dwell more fully upon these who were ready—while five others had empty lamps and at the appearance of the bridegroom tried to borrow oil from their companions. Because they were unready, they were shut out from the marriage feast. The moral of the tale was "Watch therefore, for ye know not the day nor the hour."

Human Nature Through the Ages.

Slack and shiftless folk there always have been, and always will be among all races of mankind. Human nature persists throughout the ages. The wise and foolish virgins are acutely in evidence today. The five easy-going bridesmaids thought that everything would turn out all right, without their bothering themselves. Surely the haves would share with the have-nots. It does not take deep powers of penetration to perceive the social picture contained in the incident.

As the event showed, the wise virgins could not aid the foolish without becoming foolish themselves. There are many things that one person can not do for another, as every parent knows. Individual responsibility is one of the most impressive truths of life. "Every man must live by his own faith." Right now I am witnessing the tragedy of a family wherein the only son—the last of his name and line—is unable to meet an emergency because his fond parents all through his life insisted upon making all decisions for him, and letting him accept no responsibilities for himself. Now that they need him desperately he is unable to help them. At the hour of opportunity his lamp is empty and dark.

All of the vast problem of human preparedness is contained in this old story which has for centuries gripped the imagination of the world. To be ready for life, to be ready for opportunity, to be ready for death, to be ready for God, is everybody's first and constant concern. All of education is but a providing of oil for the lamps of life. Recently my old friend, James Kearney, the Trenton editor and publicist, died; and he left a letter to his son, telling him how to carry on the paper. He adjured him to seek for himself a variety of experiences, with all kinds of people; for nothing, be it ever so simple, can enter an editor's life without contributing to his efficiency as an editor. The ingredients of the oil of preparation are numberless.

We all know wise parents who make it a habit to help their children seize opportunities to see celebrities, to witness the newest wonders, to read the great books, to know the meaning of the day's doings. They are the ones who instill the idea of readiness into formative minds. It is by fullness of preparation in little things that one is fitted for great living.

Two classes of persons have come through the world's ordeal of the past four years Those who, "like dumb, driven cattle," have simply accepted in unquestioning blindness their fate; and the others who have regarded the depression as a challenge to a study and mastery of the forces at work in control of human society. The first have learned nothing from the hard times; the second have won preparation for the world's tomorrow.

Such a Little Bit of Oil.

Destiny's doors swing on small hinges. It was such a little bit of oil that the foolish virgins needed; and they lived in a land of olives, where oil was abundant on every side. Because they lacked an ounce or two of this common lighting fuel, all their preparations for the wedding—the new clothes they had bought, the special bathing and anointing they had received, the interest of their own families and friends in their part in the festivities—all, all was wasted. It recalls the old rhyme, "For want of a nail the shoe was lost."

Many a young man's larger success has been thwarted by his deficiency in one small and apparently unimportant matter, analagous to the trifling amount of oil needed by the bridesmaids. With one it is lack of courtesy, with another it is unkemptness in appearance, with another it is unpunctuality, with another it is disregard of details. They may have fine education—be all dressed up for the wedding—but for lack of oil in their lamps they are shut out from their goal.

Grim and terrible was the conclusion of the parable. "The door was shut." The unready virgins were excluded, with complete finality. Something was missing from the wedding feast because of their failure. But they themselves were left outside the house. With a shudder we read the ominous words of warning, "The door was shut." "Too late!" is the soul's bitterest cry.

BLACKIE BEAR
By D. SAM COX

Good News Leaks Through the Bridge

Next morning, long before the sun rose, every blessed animal around Blackie's house was up and stirring. Grandpa Bear was fluttering around like a chicken with his head chopped off, and was as badly excited as a child on Christmas Eve. He just couldn't wait till the wagon was ready, and said he would walk on ahead and the wagon could catch up with him. Benny and Jenny were just crazy to go, but Bettie wouldn't even listen to such a thing. The idea of children wanting to go off on such a trip! There was no telling what sort of trouble this crowd would get into, and she certainly wasn't going to let any children of hers go into such dangers.

By the time is was light good, they had the food and the guns and everything they wanted on the wagon, and Hee-Haw was braying to go on. I am not going to tell you much about the trip down the mountain, because there didn't much happen; but I am going to tell you something about what happened after they got off of the mountain.

Always when traveling liks this Jay Bird would fly a long way ahead to see if any people were in sight, and if there was anybody in their path or was anything that looked dangerous he would fly back and tell them and they would hide out in the woods. Anyway, he would come back every once in a while to tell them there was no danger ahead, and he would ride for a while on top of the wagon or on the seat with Jocko. It was way along in the afternoon on Saturday, and Blackie had been talking about stopping over at the old goat house, where they would have a good camp for Sunday, and could rest up good for their call at Uncle Joe's house on Monday night.

They were out of the real mountains and were driving along in the little shallow waters of Coon Creek before it ran into Bear Creek. There were no big trees around—nothing except just big bushes on the sides of the creek, and if they hadn't been down in the creek anybody could have seen them from a long way off. Hee-Haw was just lazying along and nobody seemed to be in a hurry. Then here comes Jay Bird flying like a hawk was after him. He lit on the seat beside Jocko and said: "Hurry, hurry." So Jocko lashed Hee-Haw and told him to trot, and he certainly did some splashing down that creek.

Then Jay Bird said:

"Keep going just as fast as you can. Not far around that bend in the creek is a big high bridge, and you want to hurry and get under it and stop. Uncle Joe is coming down the road and if you don't get under that bridge before he gets in sight, he is sure to see his wagon and donkey."

So Jocko drove Hee-Haw as fast as he could go, and it wasn't long before they were safely under the bridge. Everybody kept just as quiet as a mouse, and waited for Uncle Joe to pass. They didn't have to wait long, for pretty soon they heard the donkey's feet pattering along the road. There was a great big tree growing right close to the bridge and it made the bridge nice and shady, so when Uncle Joe got on the bridge he stopped his donkey to let him cool off and rest under this big tree. Uncle Joe's wife was with him, and they were talking about what they were going to do on Sunday, and how they hoped they would find everybody well up at the old home.

Manvilles' Yacht Calls at Capital

Deck Party Given Aboard The Hi-Esmaro.

During the spring and early summer Washington is the mecca for many handsome yachts from all parts of the Eastern coast, but seldom have Washingtonians viewed a private ship as trim as the Hi-Esmaro, owned by Mr. and Mrs. H. Edward Manville, of New York, which is anchored at the Navy Yard. Mr. and Mrs. Manville and a party of friends who are cruising along the East Coast arrived in Washington several days ago, and yesterday entertained a number of their Washington friends aboard the yacht.

The name of the ship, Hi-Esmaro, is derived from the first two letters of the given names of Mr. and Mrs. Manville and Mr. Manville's father and mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Manville's only daughter, the former Miss Estelle Manville, was married several years ago to Count Bernadotte at one of the most brilliant weddings in this country. The ceremony was performed at the summer estate of the bride's parents at Pleasantville, N. Y.

Count and Countess Bernadotte have made their home in Stockholm, Sweden, since their marriage, but return to this country to visit for several months every year.

Lieut. and Mrs. Rogers A. Gardner, of Fort Clark, Tex., are at the Shoreham for several weeks. Their niece, Miss Syida Griggs, of San Francisco, joined them in Texas and has accompanied them to Washington. They will be joined at the Shoreham later by Mrs. Gardner's daughter, Miss Geraldine Spreckels, who will be graduated from National Park Seminary this year.

Culbertson on Bridge

The Trapper Trapped.

One of the most interesting features of Bridge strategy is the effort of contending pairs to put something over on their opponents—in other words, to so direct the course of the bidding as to conceal strength or weakness from opponents and give partner just enough encouragement to continue with the contracting until the proper contract is reached. It is an old adage that "those who live by the sword shall perish by the sword," and so it is not at all strange that occasionally this type of play results in the trapper being trapped.

The hand below was a major disaster for East and West because South double-crossed the East player by failing to bid after he had made a Takeout Double, vulnerable. The unhappy outcome of the hand, so far as East and West were concerned, was that a hand in which a Grand Slam depended only on one finesse was played in a contract of one.

East, Dealer.
North and South, vulnerable.

	♠ 8 6 5 2 ♡ Q 9 5 4 ◇ K 9 ♣ 10 5 2
♠ A Q J 9 4 ♡ 10 8 2 ◇ 10 3 2 ♣ 9 6	N W E S	♠ 10 7 ♡ A J 7 6 3 ◇ — ♣ A K Q J 7 4
	♠ K 2 ♡ K ◇ A Q J 8 7 6 5 4 ♣ 8 3

East	South	West	North
1♣	Dbl. (1)	1♠	Pass
Pass (2)	Pass (3)

1—This camouflage Double is fully justified by the holding of an eight-card suit. South desires to lay the foundation for a possible sacrifice even though vulnerable.

2—A trap pass. East is sure that South, with a hand strong enough for a Takeout Double, vulnerable, will re-enter the bidding. He hopes that he and his partner may be doubled for penalties at a low contract and desires to conceal the strength of his hand by this apparent show of weakness.

3—An excellent pass and incidentally a marvelous exhibition of restraint in bidding.

The holder of the South hand was Mr. Alphonse Moyse, jr., while the gentleman who set the trap for Mr. Moyse, holding the East hand, was Mr. Alfred Sheinwold, one of the better known of the younger composers of difficult Bridge problems.

In the play, of course, West made seven spades. The spade finessee was successful, and West discarded all his losers on the club suit in Dummy.

The hand illustrates two principles of excellent strategy: South's Double with a long suit, although weak in honor-tricks, hoping thereby to conceal his lack of defense from his nonvulnerable opponents, and Overcall after South's Double, hoping thereby to create in the mind of the South player the fact that he could safely re-enter the bidding, as it should appear to him that the East and West hands were obvious misfits and that both East and West might be bidding with the purpose of preventing their vulnerable opponents from reaching a contract they could make.

Heart Exam May Indicate Your Career

PHILADELPHIA, May 18 (U.P.).—An infant's heartbeats may indicate what career the child should follow at maturity, according to Dr. William D. Stroud, professor of cardiology, University of Pennsylvania.

Speaking before a group of heart specialists, Dr. Stroud said it may be possible to determine in childhood how the heart will function in adult years.

"There is no reason why physicians will not be able to suggest the best career for an individual by an examination of his heart," he declared. "Individuals who are ambitious to do physical things, but whose hearts would not carry them through, would be diverted into the professions."

New Temperance Attitude Manifest in Allied Youth

PRESENT THE FACTS and let youth make its own decision in regard to alcohol, advises Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, chairman of the board of administration of the Allied Youth organization, which is seeking to bring about temperance by education.

Although Organization Stands for Total Abstinence, Its Tenor Is Tolerance and Its Aim Is Educational.

IN MEETING the modern problem of repeal, age is saying to youth, not "Thou shalt not," but rather "Come let us reason together."

Exemplary of the new approach to temperance is the Allied Youth organization, which now has a membership of nearly 1,000,000 young people between the ages of 14 and 21. Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, of Washington, is chairman of the board of administration sponsoring the group.

"The movement has nothing whatever to do with prohibition," explained Mrs. Patterson. "Prohibition is a closed book. We are seeking through the Allied Youth organization to educate the honest wets as well as the honest drys as to the best methods of handling the liquor problems.

"Since repeal of the eighteenth amendment, there has been a flood of advertisement concerning alcoholic beverages and much widespread comment on what to drink and how to drink it. The sponsors of the Allied Youth movement feel that the young generation of today should be given both sides of the liquor picture. Our work is entirely educational."

Temperance Talks.

In pursuance of this plan, Mrs. Patterson Thursday afternoon entertained socially at her home, 2501 Massachusetts avenue, for 60 of her young friends. Temperance education talks were made by Capt. Richard Pearson Hobson, Miss Nettie Allen Thomas, of Winston-Salem, N. C., national secretary of the Allied Youth Movement, and Mrs. Blair Moody.

Capt. Hobson gave a scientific talk discussing the effects of alcohol on the body. Miss Thomas told of the Allied Youth organization and Mrs. Moody discussed the work of the Detroit Allied Youth group, which has 5,000 members.

There is no organized Allied Youth group in the District of Columbia, although National headquarters of the organization are located here. Twenty-two States have organizations.

While the Allied Youth group stands for total abstinance, persons who are not abstainers from alcohol may be associate members.

"Safest Policy."

"We feel that total abstinance is the wisest and safest policy for adolescents," said Mrs. Patterson. "But we are not seeking to make laws or to convert by fanatical methods. We want to present the facts and let youth make its own decision.

"On all sides we have been hearing from both wets and drys that the way to achieve temperance is to educate. Well, we are out to educate. And the education is being done by the young people themselves. They are running their own organization."

As to whether drinking among young people has increased since repeal, Mrs. Patterson would not commit herself. "It is much too early yet to judge," she said. "The immediate problem is to see that youth is presented with both sides of the liquor question so that it can make an intelligent decision concerning its own course."

WHILE a husband grimaces over stocks going down, his wife smiles contentedly that hair is going up.

If she's a wise woman she will thank her stars, for it's Hollywood that promotes this trend. Style has decreed a decidedly feminine headdress with none of the old-fashioned corresponding discomforts of corsets and petticoats.

With this 1934 privilege, it's to a woman's interest to bank her curls as high as she can. There's no getting around what it does. Like crowns of queens it gives a dignity. Like lavender and old lace, a feminine flair. It flatters young and old alike.

Women who won't welcome it are those who fear the hairdresser's bill and who lack confidence they can create a devastating coiffure themselves.

If they would make up their minds to try, take an hour out for practice in front of their dressing tables, they would see how quickly and easily the hair responds to their efforts.

A recipe for a high coiffure is: A permanent wave in the ends of the hair, or at least a good marcel, are the first requisites. Part the hair a few inches straight or slantwise from the forehead. Comb the rest smoothly back. Wind a small roll of curls well up on the head. Let it remain for 10 or 15 minutes, and voila!

Fasten them carefully with bobby pins in such a fashion they appear to be held in place of their own accord. Small invisible combs designed for this purpose are frequently used successfully.

For those who spurn curls and whirls, there's the coronet braid. Dispatches from Paris and Hollywood say they are still going strong. The woman with long hair can make her own and wind it around her head. Others with the sleek short bobs can buy theirs already made. They should arange it carefully to conceal the ends of the hair.

For women whose hair simply won't (so they say) adapt itself to anything so fanciful, there are the flower and jeweled bandeaux for evening, or the catlin type for daytime.

Jury Was Innocent.

A CASE was brought before Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, Thursday morning in which the problem seemed to be non-support.

After having heard what evidence was first brought out, the jury was sent out and Judge Bentley conferred further with the lawyers.

Arthur J. Hilland, lawyer for the defendant, evidently produced some new evidence which showed there was no real case against his client.

When the jury returned to the courtroom, Judge Bentley instructed the jury to return a verdict of "not guilty."

No foreman had been appointed so the judge motioned to No. 1—who happened to be a colored man—and asked him to be the spokesman.

Visibly flustered at this honor so suddenly thrust upon him, the dusky juryman arose and proclaimed:

The other day he was sent in a hurry for a jar of mayonnaise and some rolls. He was slow returning. Mme. Gokhman, with that feeling native to waiting mothers on such occasions, finally started to meet him and when she saw him loosed a torrent of Russian in his direction.

The small culprit lost his temper and dumped his package upon the pavement. The mayonnaise jar smashed and rolls rolled hither and yon.

Mme. Gokhman stooped and picked up the scattered rolls, then taking her son's hand in hers, she swept by the lady, saying:

TWICE widowed by two famous airship tragedies, Mrs. Joy Hancock's greatest fear was the air. But her philosophy says take your terror and beat it down, so she gritted her teeth and learned to fly.

Tennis Takes This Spring's Sports Stage

Wightman Cup Players to Defend America in the French Nationals.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

TENNIS takes the sports stage this spring with international banners flying. The Wightman Cup players are defending America in the French nationals this week, and then prepare for the Wightman series and the British classic next month.

California leads the home cheering section. One lone Easterner, Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., represents the rest of the country, compared with California's four daughters on the Wightman team.

Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., National champion and team captain, joins the team for the French hard court championships, beginning May 20. The other three California girls who sailed with Miss Palfrey are Alice Marble, of San Francisco; Carolyn Babcock, of Los Angeles, and Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana.

There is a great peace and quiet, now the question has been settled of whether Helen Wills Moody will compete this season. Never has any person's fifth lumbar vertebra been so publicly and intimately discussed.

Alice Marble told a waiting tennis world, just before sailing, the California Tennis Association had informed her Mrs. Moody would not compete in 1934. Now that we know that, we can face the tennis season with calm minds, and do our haggling about bridge.

As far as Miss Jacobs and the Wightman series are concerned, we at least know the defeated England's Dorothy Round in March at Jamaica. But reports come over that all of England's fairest are taking Mrs. Round out on a secluded court and showing her the best way to answer Miss Jacob's famous heavily chopped slice. And when we say answer, we mean counter-attack.

At home, while both golf and tennis are breaking out in all directions, the regular spring sports are still on deck.

Lacrosse, spring hockey and crew take the lead. All three are filling the sports hours at women's colleges all over the country, and hockey and lacrosse matches are being played by the hundreds of local clubs of the National organizations.

In fencing circles, the moot point is where and when the outdoor Nationals will be held.

Swimming, archery, baseball, badminton, polo, cross-country riding and jumping, hiking, fishing, basket ball, volley ball—every one has a favorite but the average modern sportswoman puts on her spring sports clothes, looks the season over, and takes a handful.

Should Wives Work? Answer Sought by Post

HAS economic America arrived at a cross-roads where a woman must choose between being a wife and an independent self-directed human being? Does marriage mean she must give up all self-expression outside the home and go back to the pots and pans—that she must sell her soul for a mess of pottage?

On the other hand, shall working wives continue to take the jobs that unemployed men with dependent families need? Shall mothers continue to find careers outside the home and leave their children to the care of hirelings?

Answer of Interest.

These questions have been hurled bitterly back and forth between opponents and proponents of the married woman in industry. The answer to them holds peculiar interest because it is sufficiently significant to command the attention of sociologists and economists and at the same time personal enough to touch the life of every man and woman in urban communities.

Read Post Series.

In an effort to unravel these tangled elements and to answer the questions of the outcome of the present day trend, the woman's page of The Post, beginning Monday, will present a series of articles dealing with every phase of the question. Hope Ridings Miller, of The Post's woman's page staff, has interviewed economists, sociologists, feminists, club leaders, Government workers, Representatives and others to obtain a comprehensive view of the problem. Her articles are based on facts and on the opinions of men and women in a position to know what is happening and to offer a clear view of future possibilities.

Read on The Post's woman's page Monday what those have to say who believe the place of woman is the home.

Now Mrs. Hancock Has Beaten Down Terror by Courting It

She's Had a Tragic Time of It, With Her First Husband a Victim of the ZR-2 Disaster and Her Second Killed in the Shenandoah Crack-Up.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE BEST way to rout fear is to court deliberately the thing that causes the fear emotion. That is the philosophy of Mrs. Joy Hancock, who, after being twice widowed by airship crashes, forced herself to learn to fly.

"I was scared to death, of course, the first few times I went up," she admitted yesterday in her office at the Navy Department. She is in charge of information for the Department's Bureau of Aeronautics. "And I don't enjoy being at the controls even now. But after I learned to pilot an airplane I had a lot more confidence in other pilots. I can sit back in a passenger's seat now, perfectly at ease."

Mrs. Hancock's first husband, Lieut. C. G. Little, was killed less than a year after they were married, when the ZR-2 crashed in England. The ZR-2 was the United States Navy's first rigid airship. It was built in England and Lieut. Little was sent over as part of its crew. Shortly before the airship's date of departure for the United States, Lieut. Little's bride returned to this country to make a home ready for him. She had been here just a week when the ZR-2 crashed and burned on its last trial flight. Lieut. Little was among the victims.

Got a Job.

The young widow immediately applied to the Bureau of Aeronautics for a job, realizing the routine of steady work would be the best thing for her. She had served as a yeomanette at the Navy's air station at Cape May, N. J., during the last month of the war, when barely old enough to enlist. Her first position with the Bureau of Aeronautics was in the personnel department.

After she had been there a year she resigned to go to Lakehurst, N. J.

"The Shenandoah was being built there and I wanted to watch the process, so I got a job in the office of the plant manager in charge of construction," she said lightly. It didn't seem to occur to her she had been extremely fortunate in getting jobs just when and where she wanted them. But then with her warm friendliness, beauty, and intelligence, Joy Hancock probably will never have much difficulty sailing past hard-headed employment managers; for that matter, in sailing through life itself.

She resigned her position at Lakehurst to marry Lieut. Comdr. Lewis Hancock, executive officer of the Shenandoah. When he was killed in the Shenandoah's spectacular crack-up, the twice-widowed young woman traveled abroad for several years. She was determined not to let the tragedy submerge her completely. But traveling lost its attraction, eventually, and she again applied to the Bureau of Aeronautics for a job. That was in 1931.

Around World Again.

She was assigned to the general information office, then under the direction of Lieut. Comdr. Price. When he was detached a year or so later she was put in charge of the office. She left the bureau again in 1933 to make another trip around the world. Two months ago she came back to the general information office.

"But I'm not making any promises about staying put," she laughted yesterday. "I'll probably yield to wanderlust again. But I know I'll always keep in close touch with aviation. It fascinates me. On my travels, I'd hurry out to the airport of every city I visited. And I did quite a bit of flying in India and in parts of Europe. That was after I had learned how to pilot an airplane myself and had lost much of my dread of being in the air."

Mrs. Hancock's work as head of the Bureau of Aeronautics' general information office consists in preparing data on the bureau's affairs to be released to the press through the Navy Department's press room. She also compiles the bureau's semimonthly letter from material sent in by all the Navy's aviation units. The publication is sent to each unit so it may know what the other units are doing.

"Then there are stacks of letters to be answered on questions concerning aviation, asked by civilians about the Bureau of Aeronautics," she explained. "In fact, when anybody wants to know anything about the Navy's air force, it is up to this office to answer it."

Children Make Good Will Plea; Advocate Peace

PEACE on earth promises to become an established fact when the younger generation starts running the world.

For neighborly good will was the theme of the program the World Federation of Education presented in its annual broadcast at the National Education Association yesterday. The young representatives of seven countries, while extolling the glories of their own lands, in their speeches, were completely in accord in their expression of a desire for a united world with nations living in harmony.

Tiny children of diplomats, their hands held by proud and anxious parents, nonchalantly walked to the microphone and sent their messages of good will to the far places of the world.

Hero of the afternoon was 9-year-old Teddy Chalkley, son of the commercial counselor of the British Embassy.

Young Teddy, with admirable poise, rattled off facts about political freedom and England's contributions to science in fine style. Not once did he stumble on a big word, and he seemed a little surprised that anyone should think his performance unusual.

Venezuela, Russia, Greece, Italy, Wales and Belgium also were represented in the broadcast. After each speech the national anthem of the speaker's country was played.

B. L. Queneau, of Belgium, who has studied in many countries, expressed his regret that school books in all lands subject children to proaganda.

"I hope the good neighbor policy will some day do away with the ultra-nationalistic spirit," he said.

Dr. Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, warned listeners that unless the dragon of war is conquered, it will conquer the world.

"No nation can be self-sufficient," Dr. Sayre said. "The policy of economic nationalism now being expounded in many lands will eventually lead us into a great war if not discontinued.

"Both the greedy men and the sincere patriots who declare economic nationalism to be the only cure for depression and safeguard against war, must be made to realize the danger of such a policy."

Posters drawn by high school contestants in the cartoon contest conducted by the National Education Association protested vigorously against the false economy now being practiced by curtailing school funds. One of the most striking showed the world being crushed by mechanical inventions. The caption said "Education is the only way to meet the needs of a changing world."

Human Turns Robot, Displays Quality Shirts

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A MECHANICAL man, masterpiece of modern science, has nothing on the flesh-and-blood being who goes robot in the window of a downtown department store.

Behind the large glass he moves with machine-like precision, as though each pulse beat was dictated by an electric motor. He stares with motionless eyes and maintains a painted expression. Remarks and jokes from amused spectators fall apparently on deaf ears.

A casual observer would suppose him to be a glorified dummy, wound up to display the fine brand of shirts which surround him. Wives who shop for the menfolk, or men who shop for themselves, should certainly see the bargain buys.

They come in two styles, with plain collars, and two detachables, both in solids and stripes, priced at the moment for $1.

Hello New Stock.

When a fine grade powder is reduced to less than a third of its normal price is doesn't mean the quality has in any way deteriorated. Sometimes these sales are advertising schemes. More frequently they mean farewell to old stock and hello to new.

Such is the case at present. A popular brand put up in polished bakelite boxes ordinarily sells for $1.50. Now as a sort of hallelujah gesture to a re-order, it is going, going, and practically gone for 38 cents.

Makes 'Em Run Proof.

One universal cause for language such as &!$"(@! is an impromptu run in a new pair of hose. When a woman considers one run can ruin her disposition for the day, and add a decimal point to her stocking bill, she should be delighted to learn of a new preparation which is stocking insurance itself.

It comes in the form of a powder neatly inclosed in a paper envelope. The price is 25 cents.

Double wearing quality is guaranteed to hose which have been soaked in a half pint of tepid water with a teaspoonful of the powder dissolved in it. They should remain in the preparation for half an hour, taken out and allowed to dry, then washed in warm water and soap flakes. The result is a run-proof pair of hose.

• • • •

Dress It Up.

A cake is a cake. But it's vastly more appealing to the eye with a few decorations. There was a time when only bakers knew the art of making iced rosebuds and curleycues. But now the process is easily mastered by amateur cake makers if they will use the tools suggested by a local shop.

They may be bought, all in one container. Two size tubes, for a big or little job, and designers in six styles. Icing poured through any of these will emerge in fanciful flowers and figures and turn an ordinary cake into a true aristocrat.

• • • •

Tropical Towels.

Beaches will be lively looking affairs this summer if there is a predominance of beach towels such as those featured by a local store.

Tropical colors, orange, red, blue, green, run a race of stripes up and down the 6-foot length and form bar on bar across the 3-foot width.

Whether used as protective robes or rugs, they'll be serviceable and attractive equipment for salt-water tourists.

• • • •

Dainty Gifts.

A package of diminuitive dimensions has by reason of its dainty contents won recognition as an ideal "acquaintance gift." It includes two bath cubes, a small bottle of perfume and a cake of fine soap, all of these scented with lavender.

It sells for 50 cents.

Disguise and Remedy.

Those who maintain there is nothing new under the sun have not seen the latest lotion in the toilet goods department of an F street store. There have been, and still are many of the same type, concocted to clear up eruptions and blackheads. But this one, recently released, from all reports, is doing all it's said to do.

There is nothing miraculous about it. It's simply a healing antiseptic to be applied with a piece of absorbent cotton to those sections of the face most conspicuously broken out. It should be allowed to dry on the skin and then removed. For the quickest benefit, the directions suggest leaving it on over night.

It is recommended as a particularly fine powder base when wiped on lightly. Women and girls who are troubled with skin disorders will find it serves both as a fine disguise and a splendid remedy.

All for One.

A nineteen-piece tumbler set is selling for $1. Shoppers who immediately surmise it couldn't be worth much ought to see it. Old hobnail designs the gracefully shaped pitcher and the three varieties of glasses. Some of these are tall highballs, some medium-size tumblers, and others wine or cocktail size.

Here is a good buy for summer sippers.

If You're Partial to Crust, You Will Go for Popovers

This Standard Recipe Makes Delicious Ones, but Whole Wheat, and Those Made of Rice Are Super-Excellent.

By Ann Barrett.

IF YOU like crust, you probably like popovers. Because that's all they are—just beautiful, brown, egg-flavored crust, puffed up around some hot air. And when you break them open to melt a piece of good butter over the inside, you'll likely agree with actress Constance Bennett, that's an eating adventure.

First, have the pans well greased and sizzling-hot before you start the batter. (Iron muffin pans or ovenware custard cups are better than tin muffin pans, but the latter will do. If you use custard cups, set them on cookie sheet so you can take them from oven more easily.) Second, bake your popovers in a hot oven (450 F.) for 15 minutes. (It is this high heat that makes them pop up in the pan.) Third, reduce heat to 350 F. and bake popovers 10 to 15 minutes more, depending on size). Fourth, turn off the heat and leave popovers in oven 5 more minutes to "firm" them still more, so they can not possibly fall.

Standard Recipe.

Aside from these special cautions, here's the standard popover recipe: First sift 1 cup of sifted general-purpose flour into a bowl with ¼ teaspoon salt. Into this mix 1 cup milk, pouring it in gradually and stirring fast so as to avoid lumping. In another bowl, beat 2 eggs thoroughly with rotary beater, and add to them 1 teaspoon melted butter. Then turn this into the milk and flour mixture and beat with strong rotary beater till smooth and creamy (2 minutes). Finally, turn mixture at once into hot, well-greased muffin tins or custard cups, filling them only half-full. Bake 15 minutes at 450 F. Reduce heat to 350 F. for 10 or 15 minutes longer. Turn heat off and let popovers stand in oven 5 minutes more.

Yorkshire Pudding.

Yorkshire pudding is practically popovers in disguise. Use the same recipe, but substitute 1 teaspoon melted beef drippings for the teaspoon of melted butter. Turn the batter into a hot pan (about 8 inches square by 2 inches deep) that has first been well greased with 4 tablespoons melted beef drippings. Bake about 20 minutes at 450 F., then reduce heat to 350 F. for about 15 minutes more. Then cut pudding into strips or squares and serve around roast beef. Serve plenty of beef gravy.

Other Popovers.

For very good whole wheat popovers, use 1-3 cup white flour and 2-3 cup whole wheat flour in above recipe, instead of all white flour. For especially shiny popovers with a slightly different flavor, use ¼ cup mashed, cooked rice in first recipe, in place of ¼ cup of the flour.

Luscious Berry Desserts Win Post Awards

FROM every section of the city, and from neighboring towns in Virginia and Maryland, came the recipes for luscious strawberry desserts in the contest announced last week by The Washington Post. Judging was difficult, because so many unusual and interesting recipes were received, but after reading and re-reading them the judges announce these winners:

Mrs. Helen Nielsen, 2813 Twenty-seventh street northwest, $3, first prize, for a recipe for "Malteser Rice," which has strawberries and Rhine wine among its ingredients.

Mrs. Mildred S. Fisher, 502 Trail avenue, Frederick, Md., $2, second prize, for a recipe for "Brown Betty," which she describes as "a welcome change from the unusal Brown Betty."

Mrs. Betty Greene, 1430 V street northwest, $1, for "Strawberry Hon," a hurry-up dessert to make with ice cream.

Many excellent recipes had to be discarded because they were duplicated, and there were others which survived the preliminary eliminations and lost out only in the final judging. A fine spirit was displayed by the contestants, many of whom said they would send other recipes in later contests if they did not win this time. The increase of prizes to three a week also received much favorable comment.

Malteser Rice.

2 cups of Rhine wine
4 cups of strawberries
2 tablespoons of lemon juice, rind from half a lemon
4 tablespoons of sugar

Boil rice until soft, but whole. Then put rice in sieve and run cold water over it until clear. Bring wine, sugar, lemon rind and juice to a boiling point. Then mix with rice, and let stand on a hot plate for half an hour. Then put in an oiled ring form, and when cold serve on a glass plate garnished with strawberries. Mix the portion that is left over with whipped cream and place in the center.

Strawberry Betty.

1 quart fresh strawberries
1 cup powdered sugar
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 eggs well beaten
1 tablespoon sugar
3 tablespoons melted butter
½ cup sweet milk

Cut berries in halves, mix with 1 cup sugar. Sift dry ingredients. Mix butter, eggs and milk, and add to dry ingredients. Place in well buttered baking dish a layer of batter, then a layer of berries, and repeat until all have been used. Place in oven or a covered steamer and steam about 40 to 45 minutes. Serve with the following sauce:

Mix together 1½ cups sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons flour. Add 1½ cups hot water and 1 tablespoon butter. Bring to a boil and add ½ cup cut strawberries.

Strawberry Hon.

Ice cream
Honey
Strawberries
Whipped cream

Place a scoop of ice cream in a sundae dish; pour over this about two tablespoons of strained honey and a generous amount of crushed strawberries; top with whipped cream and place a large whole strawberry on top.

I WAS A SPY!

By MARTHE McKENNA

THEN I learned what seemed a veritable miracle. All my brothers had come through with their lives, although the two youngest would be permanent invalids. Within a week Lucille had joined us, a little older, a little more weary-looking, but with the same unquenchable spirit.

"Those were the bad times, eh?" she chuckled. "More than six times I gave myself up as done for. Yes—Holland was a good place in those days when one had the 'Vampires' behind with their noses to the ground——"

Old Friends Return.

Every day brought us fresh surprises; friends turning up who had been long mourned as lost, people who had escaped by miracles. How we talked—of Canteen Ma, of the kindly Oberartz, of No. 63, of poor Fashugel, of "Silent Willy," of Alphonse, who was soon to become a priest, and all those others, friend and foe, who have passed across these pages. Ah, happy days. Home again—to see the Town-Kammandant's office a deserted ruin across the Place; to see good-natured Belgian gendarmes in the streets; to walk at one's will in the town, day or night, without the thought of the accursed curfew; to hear no longer those eternal guttural voices, to know that those happy days of before the war were coming back, even though we did live in a land of ruins.

The French and American soldiers in the town did all they could to help us. Everyone belonged to one great family. Old inhabitants poured back into the town. They came by rail and they came by road, with their donkey-carts and their packs on their backs. Many were helped on their way in Allied lorries and ambulances, and old women found their bundles being carried by strange grinning soldiers, who did not understand a word they said.

Families stood gazing dismally upon the ruins of their homes, but a moment later they were cheerful and ready to sing. Mighty Germany was beaten to her knees! The dust clouds had subsided behind the last of the field-gray armies, the areas under occupation had become La Belgique once again. But I, at any rate, shall always remember some of those nobler emissaries, men of all ranks, who came with the gray wave.

It seemed at first as though we should never return to normal conditions, but as the months slipped by beautiful new buildings began to spring up all over Flanders. All the time-worn architecture of the past was dust, but with amazing skill exact replicas were constructed everywhere. Prosperity returned to the land. Lack of food and exercise and constant anxiety had worn me to a shade of my former self, and for a long time I was an invalid in body, if not in mind. I could not bear the sight or smell of meat and good food, and I had to live on potato peeling and turnip soup.

The prison routine seriously weakened my eyes and for some months I was under the care of doctors, as I almost went blind. My demobilization papers and my prison pay arrived from the British Intelligence Commission I received an intimation that I had been mentioned in dispatches by Sir Douglas Haig and that a British decoration was to be sent to me. I was honored to receive the French and Belgian Legions d' Honneur, also.

Our old house at Westroosebeke was to be rebuilt, and I made a pilgrimage to the ruins where my father aeons before had been nearly roasted alive. Hardly a brick stood one upon another. Only a notice on a bullet-marked board told the returning pilgrim, "This is Westroosebeke." The leafy, whispering lanes and the smiling glades where we had spent our childhood were a hideous pock-marked wilderness. Standing near the site of the Austrian telegraph hut I wondered what had become of all the puppets of the drama. A party of British soldiers were resting by the roadside, and a young officer, seeing me standing there, came over and asked in a quiet voice if I had once lived here. That young officer not long afterward became my husband.

Not long after my marriage I happened to come to England with my husband. He suggested that I should put in a claim at the War Office for a refund of the money from my own pocket which I had given British prisoners when helping them to escape, as also other amounts which I had contributed to a secret fund for the assistance of prisoners and small sums expended on odd occasions. Altogether it amounted to a few hundreds of pounds, which I had expended with a perfectly good will, but rightly or wrongly would not be sorry to see again.

The courteous, pleasant-faced man behind the big desk in Whitehall smiled at me as though I was a naughty little girl, rested his elbows on the table and plaited his fingers.

"Quite, quite," he pronounced when he had heard my case. "But let me see—you have signed your demobilization papers, have you not?"

I agreed, but explained that I understood that the papers I had signed were dealing solely with my prison pay; a fact which the intelligence commissioners had assured me, and adding that at the time when the transaction had gone through I was not in a fit state of health to bother my head about such questions. The courteous official rose elegantly and gazed at the door, as much as to say: "Well, now it is time to go . . ."

"I am afraid I can do nothing for you, Madame," was what he actually did say. "The act of signing those papers canceled any official indebtedness on our part. I am sure you see my point."

"Then I have no hope of regaining my money?" I put as a last resort.

"You see, Madame, there are no special funds to which I could apply for your claim. If I might suggest it—er—could you not go to the Germans? Put in a special claim against the Reparations Commission." I nearly laughed in his face.

Recalls Her Perils.

I, who had risked death daily at the trigger fingers of a German firing party, who was responsible for the destruction of many German lives, who had been court-martialed and condemned to death for espionage—I was to go to Berlin and demand payment for helping British prisoners to escape. He was a farceur, that man.

My husband took my arm.

"Don't bother about it," he said. "We have other things to think about." He was right. It was not worth bothering about. Red tape is red tape all the world over.

We went back to Flanders, where the work of reconstruction was going on apace. In a year's time a new house stood on the site of our old house at Westroosebeke, and flowers as gay as the flowers of 1914 grew in a new garden.

So for me in the end the war brought happiness!

The End.

What Today Means

By Mary Blake.
"Taurus."

If May 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m.

You will possibly meet a person on this date whose personality will have a very unpleasant reaction upon first meeting him. Do not allow yourself to become prejudiced, for later on the many sterling qualities this party possesses will gain your admiration, and be the open seasame to a close friendship. The greater part of the day will be devoted to enjoyable social affairs or relaxation. It will prove an unsatisfactory day to try and accomplish anything in the way of new business matters. Money will be spent, and very little, if any, earned unless engaged in the retail food or amusement business. If unmarried, you will have a favorable opportunity to give vent to your sentimental thoughts to the one that inspires them, and providing they are discreetly expressed will be cordially received. Any attempt to practice insincerity on this May 19 will be detected.

If you are a woman and this is your natal day, you may be happy in the thought that your heart's desire may ultimately be realized. You, however, must overcome the inclination to be capricious. You have too fine and magnanimous a disposition to let it be spoiled by indulging, at times, in what amounts to be almost freakish whims. Being unusually capable in handling other people and directing their efforts, commercial life offers unlimited opportunity for one with your personality.

The child born on May 19, as soon as it is old enough to understand, must be taught the value of time. Instinctively, by nature, it will not have the slightest conception of what a precious thing time really is. Unless this trait is corrected when young, the habit of being continually late will become a characteristic, which is a pernicious fault.

The man born on May 19 is an energetic hustler, bound to succeed in anything he takes up seriously. If born on this date, refrain from having your fingers in too many pies. It is much better to concentrate on doing one thing and doing it well than attempting several in a slip-shod manner. Your business affairs may surprise you by far more gratifying results than are anticipated at the present time, if optimism becomes your daily rule.

May 19 will prove a very easy and enjoyable day, far more propitious for social than business affairs, and one conducive to good fellowship.

How to Keep Well

Muscle Weakness.

A new line of treatment for a group of hitherto hopeless and badly neglected diseases appears to be opening up. The probability is that for most of them the treatment will not be a cure, but it appears to be able to interrupt the progress of the disease and to gain back considerable of the lost groud. Among the diseases in the group are progressive muscular atrophy, any anthropic lateral sclerosis, myasthenia gravis and severalothers that are characterized by great muscular weakness and, in most instances, by muscle weakness.

The new treatment consists in improving the condition of the muscles and, in that way, interrupting the disease and increasing the patient's efficiency and comfort.

The remedies used are amino acids. These are substances akin to protein but lower in the scale. Just as molecules, once thought simple bodies, were split into atoms and the latter, once thought the simplest of bodies, have been split into still simpler bodies, so the proteins we know have been split up into some weeny simple bodies called amino acids.

Another significant point is the fact that so many of these diseases with muscle weakness and wasting start with growing pains. We have been charging those pains up to rheumatism exclusively.

Know of Any Good Salads? Send Recipes

WITH the weather growing warmer, salads will appear more frequently on the table, so the subject of the next contest will be "Summer Salads." Recipes submitted should have as their base any fresh fruits or vegetables now on the market.

Several readers last week submitted strawberry salad recipes. Since they did not come under the heading "desserts," these recipes have been held over and will be judged in next week's contest.

The prizes are the same, $3, $2 and $1. Recipes should be submitted by next Thursday morning at the latest to Susan Mills, of The Washington Post. Post readers everywhere are eligible. Contestants who did not win this week are invited to try again next week. Watch for the announcement of winners in next Saturday's Post.

Frills Go Out, Simplicity Arrives In the Latest Paris Showings

FROTH, frills, and fanciful doodads have been ripped from the clothes shown at the Paris midseason openings. The slim, undraped, unruffled, and unruched silhouette has come back with a bang.

Even Augustabernard, a regular little glutton for drapery, has smoothed out her dresses into long, slitherjng lines. When she has a little fullness left over she arranges it in one narrow vertical fold down the center front of daytime dresses. In her evening gowns she bunches three or four infinitesimal folds in one place; sometimes on the side, sometimes in the back.

Vionnet runs true to her old form. She still throws a bias cut or two into every garment, but always with the idea of taking out as much fullness as possible. Her evening gowns look as if they were glued to the body as far down as the knees. Even below the knees there is scant fullness.

The bell silhouette—just a fancy way of referring to a curved hemline—is Schiaparelli's special pet. It also clings tightly to the hips. If this style becomes widespread, the army of women bicycle riders will gain a good many recruits.

Some of the designers have reverted to a type of design used several years ago: the wraparound. Chanel is using it for all sorts of things from jaunty street frocks to ultra-formal evening gowns. Frequently she strings buttons down the outer side of the bodice and then leaves the skirt open. This is for daytime, of course.

Long-Run Hits Quietly Close Their Seasons

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is not alone in Washington that the last winter vestiges of the drama are beginning to disappear. While, with the Belasco closing on Saturday night and only one more week of light musical frolicking at the Gayety, the Capital will soon be on a strictly hot weather amusement ration, the same is virtually true in the Broadway area.

Max Gordon, for instance, announces that on Saturday, May 26, the New York run of "The Shining Hour" will come to an end.

This is the play that is to be substituted by Manager Stephen E. Cochran and his National Theater Players for the proposed tryout production of "Marian's House," starring Laurette Taylor, which will not be ready in time for summer presentation.

Gladys Cooper, a recent visitor to Washington, to take part in the Actors Fund Benefit; Adrienne Allen and Raymond Massey, the featured members of the New York cast, together with their associates in the company, will sail at once for England following the close of the play at the Booth Theater in New York. "The Shining Hour" will be presented in London early in the fall.

The Guide, Too.

"Ah, Wilderness," the Eugene O'Neill comedy which has been such a phenomenal success with George M. Cohan in the stellar role, will end its run at the Guild Theater on June 2.

On that date, the play will have been presented for the record run of the house—35 weeks. The company will rest for the summer, pending the beginning of a road tour that will take "Ah, Wilderness" to some 60 cities, beginning in Mr. Cohan's home town, Providence, R. I., on September 28.

It was the original purpose of the Guild to close the run of "Mary of Scotland," too, when it came time for Helen Hayes to resume picture making and Philip Merivale to return to England, but that plan has been abandoned. With Margalo Gilmore in the title role and Stanley Ridges, former National Theater Players leading man, in the Merivale part, "Mary of Scotland" will be kept open. It too, will be sent on a tour of 44 principal cities with Miss Hayes' return to the cast in the fall.

Summer, thus, must be upon us, thermometer recordings to the contrary notwithstanding.

Request has been made that it be pointed out with some emphasis that the Columbia Players' performance of Benn W. Levy's play, "The Devil Passes," has been deferred from the date of May 22, originally announced, to the evening of Wednesday, June 6, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets. This will be an invitational performance in compliment to the subscribing members of the Columbia Players' group and other favored friends.

The play was first presented in London in 1930 and the next year was brought to Broadway. It was one of the National Theater's important attractions season before last, with Diana Wynyard, since gone on to fame in films; Cecelia Loftus, Mary Nash, Basil Rathbone, Arthur Byron and Robert Loraine in the leading roles.

The Columbia Players have assembled an excellent cast for their interpretation of the play.

Thar's Gold in Them Films!

Freddy Sherman, who this week rejoined the National Theater Players in the role of the hotel clerk in "Welcome Stranger," will return to Hollywood after the "little season" at the National is over.

"While I couldn't resist spending another spring and early summer in Washington," says Freddy, "I am returning to California as soon as this engagement is over because there are two profitable avenues of employment open to actors on the West Coast. There are six community and repertoire companies in Los Angeles, Pasadena and Hollywood and an engagement with any one of them brings your work directly to the attention of screen executives. Yes, I confess it. I expect to land on the screen eventually. What actor doesn't? Steadier work and greater profits are two advantages of screen work that can not be disregarded."

The Alumni Speak.

Mr. Sherman's philosophy is sound. That he has some grounds for his optimism is exemplified by a recent happening.

Ed Arnold, Roger Pryor, Donald Woods and John Warburton, all graduates of the National Theater Players, who are now prospering at their labors in the Hollywood vineyards, had a get-together one night recently over their hot milk and toasted graham crackers. The outgrowth of this session in the famous Brown Derby in Hollywood was the following wire to Panjandrum Steve Cochran, of the E street repertoire company:

"As graduates of the greatest stock company in America we hope our pictures playing around the corner will not keep down your grosses. Regards to all the gang and best wishes for a record-breaking season."

This, as I say, is part, at least, of the inspiration for Sherman's march to the cinema!

A card from Ray and Virginia Bell, the former associate of Lou Brown in the publicity department of the Loew theaters in Washington and his bride, indicates that these agreeable and itinerant young people are at the moment handsomely ensconced in the Hotel Leamington in Miami, Fla., where, according to the slogan at the top of the card, is it "Warm in Winter; Cool in Summer"—a good trick even if you can't do it! Mr. and Mrs. Bell, one learns, are enjoying a belated honeymoon and will be back in the Capital in a fortnight.

More Summer Theater.

The directors of the Washington Summer Theater Group, Elizabeth Sypher, Margaret Yard and Charles Turner, announce the addition to their acting forces of Lucille Cohan, known to radio fans as Jean Abbey; Maurice Jarvis, one of the Capital's best-known actors; Frank E. Jamison, whose life has been devoted to the professional theater; H. Eugene Stevens, talented character actor, and Francis Shinn, who won applause for his work in the stellar role of "Charlie's Aunt," when it was revived here a short time ago.

The summer group has chosen for its first play of the season, "Under the Gaslight," one of the highly successful nineteenth century melodramas. The play is to go into rehearsal today.

Serving on Miss Sypher's staff are Hugo Iden, scenic designer; Lilla La Garde, period adviser; Dorothy Yaeger, technical research; M. Forney Reese, business manager, and Charles Turner, press representative.

When Phil Hayden stages his "Gonna Do a Show" revue out at Wardman Park tonight, many of his numbers will be in accord with modern trends. For example, in harmony with the streamline tendency of the present day, the "Modern Mania" number will express numerous aspects of mechanism in its various phases, and the "Blue Eagle Parade," dedicated to Commissar General Crackdown Johnson, will be an augmented presentation of the original creation devised by Mr. Hayden for the Junior League ball last winter. This elaborate number will be accorded unusual accordion accompaniment by Mr. Hayden, Sylvia Kaplowitz and Margaret Scott.

"Waitin' on the Levee."

At 8:30 tonight, Capt. John Emering, veteran Wilson Line skipper, will signal "half-speed astern" to the engine room of the modern steamer, City of Washington. Slowly this popular excursion boat will back into the Potomac channel, then "full-speed ahead" and the 1934 moonlight excursion season will be officially opened.

Already more than 60 organizations have booked excursions on the Wilson Line and indications are that last season's record of 135,000 passengers will be eclipsed this year. Potomac River trips will be run daily until September 10.

Ann Pennington will have an important part in "The Black Crook," when that fabulous old piece is revived at the People's Theater, down on the Bowery, in New York, early next month.

"Ask Dad" Note.

That famous number now probably will be known as "The March of the Annazons!"

A legacy of the past, with the accent on the first syllable—er, ah, limb, shall we say?

"HALF A SINNER." Universal picturization of "Alias the Deacon," a play by John B. Hymer and LeRoy Clemens, featuring Burton Churchill, Joel McCrea and Sally Blaine. Directed by Kurt Neumann. Reviewed Thursday morning by W. A. Whitney.

"Deacon" Caswell once romped through and evening of delightful comedy on the stage, and now he returns via the silver screen to continue the gambol—or gamble—for Burton Churchill, in the principal role, does both to perfection.

Having played the Hymer-Clemens opus many times on the stage, he finds an equally choice role in the screen version of "Alias the Deacon;" offered under the inept title of "Half a Sinner."

Burton Churchill's interpretation of the deacon is that of a modern Robin Hood, finding his Sherwood Forest wherever he may happen to be. Quiet and deliberate, Mr. Churchill in word and deed, extracts all the drama and comedy of the piece, and it is with regret that the spectator watches the picture close on his seeking greener and less dangerous fields for the practice of his particular talents.

Happy Lovers.

As the young lovers, Joel McCrea and Sally Blane make a happy pair. Mickey Rooney, as the son of the hotel keeper, has a choice part. "Sister" Clark is played by Alexandra Carlisle.

The sinister machinations of the piece are contrived by Spencer Charters and Russell Hopton. Guinn Williams has a nice part as the "dumb" rassler, and Reginald Barlow plays a sheriff who can, in certain circumstances, overlook the law.

From start to finish "Half a Sinner" is hilarious, clean, fast comedy built for sheer entertainment. It will, too, bear the test of critical analysis, for the play is closely knit and logically presented.

Chief among the subsidiary attractions is The Washington Post feature, "Strange as It Seems," by John Hix. Other subjects include Oswald Rabbit's version of "Goldielocks and the Three Bears" and the Universal News.

But don't miss the deacon playing poker!

Hollywood, May 17.—Leo Carrillo may play the role of one of his own uncles. We found that out down at M-G-M studios today.

The way of it is this. The Carrillo family history is closely bound up with that of Los Angeles, Leo's ancestors having been among the early settlers here. And M-G-M is planning to make a picture founded on the story of the City of the Angels, placing it in the old days when that fair city was a little Spanish pueblo. No such picture, it is pointed out, has been made. Leo would star in the production.

"It's a cince I wouldn't be understood," said Oakie. "The only chance I'd have of finding a girl to understand the situations that pictures naturally place me in is in a studio. She would have to be a member of the acting profession, too. Even then I'd be taking a big chance on her not getting the right slant on my work."

No More Oil On Body!

Sunburn or no sunburn, Dorothy Burgess isn't going to oil her body any more when she goes in swimming.

The reason? Dorothy smeared herself all over just before going swimming in her pool on Sunday. And bees, many bees, in fact it seemed to her all the bees in Hollywood, found it out, and even went out of town to fetch other bees. Before she knew it, as she sat paddling her feet in the water at the pool's edge, the exposed parts of her body were covered with the insects, and in brushing them off she got several bad stings.

"Anyway, if I ever do oil again," said the petite Dorothy, "I'll try the oil on a bee first, and see if he has a taste for it."

Choral Society Gives Lighter Works of Bach

By Ray C. B. Brown.

An unhackneyed and interesting program of choral compositions was presented last evening by the Washington Choral Society, under the direction of Louis A. Potter, at its May festival concert in Central High School Auditorium. The organization was assisted by 16 members of the National Symphony Orchestra and the Madrigal Group, consisting of Helen Howison, Mildred Colvin, Vera Neely Ross, Bertha Morgan, George Meyers, H. I. Maycock, Edwin Steffe and Aubrey S. Goodrich. Walter Nash and Gene Stewart presided at piano and organ.

The major work offered was Bach's cantata, "The Four Seasons," sung in an abbreviated and modified version in which the solos were omitted and three chorales inserted. The cantatas of Bach are not as well known as they should be, and the opportunity of hearing this one, even in an altered form, was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

In his secular cantatas, Bach expressed with more freedom the genial and humorous aspects of his character; they were the outlets for the high spirits that he held in check on serious occasions. "The Four Seasons" rises to sheer gayety at times; lines of such melancholy import as "Our youth, like spring time, soon must pass" are set to an infectiously happy tune that Sir Arthur Sullivan might have written.

Having intoned these measures with vigor and commendable qualities of tone, the chorus proceeded to sing a capella four madrigals: Gevaert's arrangement of an old French "Chanson de Mai," Orlando di Lasso's comedic "Farmer, What's In Your Sack;" Eaton Fanning's "Moonlight" and Moellendorff's "Night Whispers." These were sung excellently, with some notable delicacies of shading.

The madrigal group presented two effective and expertly written songs by Mary Howe, the first a setting of Shelley's "Music When Soft Voices Die," and the other "I See Thy Sweet Face in Every Flower."

Mrs. Howe's "Chain Gang Song," an amplification for chorus and orchestra of a tune from J. M. Carlisle's collection, did not sound so well last evening as it did when recently heard at the Washington Composers Club concert. The fault did not lie in the score, but in the interpretation, which was uneven, disjointed and evidently insufficiently rehearsed.

The closing choral work was Deems Taylor's cantata setting of Oliver Wendell Holmes' "The Chambered Nautilus," sung for the first time here. Upon this much care had certainly been spent, for the chorus did it ample justice, and built up some fine climaxes. The cantata is one of Mr. Taylor's earlier compositions, and has a freshness, a lyrical beauty and an imaginative quality which are too often missing from his operas.

As instrumental interludes, the chamber orchestra played during the program Mozart's overture to "Le Nozze di Figaro," an intermezzo from Granados, "Goyescas," Jarnefeldt's "Praeludium," and the March of Homage from Grieg's "Sigurd Jorsalfar" suite.

Rail Agreement Opens 100 Jobs

Western Maryland Pact Gives Pay Raise.

Hagerstown, Md., May 18 (Spl.).—Approximately 100 more men will be given employment here as a result of an agreement between shop employes of the Western Maryland Railroad and company officials. The new agreement was signed in Baltimore. Shop employes of the company have been unorganized since the strike of union workers in 1925. Better Ethics Are Urged In Business

Rotarian Tells Roanoke Convention Ideals of Organization.

Roanoke, Va., May 18 (AP).—A fellowship luncheon and a meeting of newly elected officers brought to a close the Fifty-sixth District Rotary International convention here today. The meeting has been in session since Wednesday.

Speakers at today's meetings included Algernon Blair, of Montgomery, Ala., a member of the international vocational service committee; Dr. Fong Foo Sec, of Shanghai, director of Rotary International; Joseph A. Turner, of Hollins, and H. H. Newman, of Woodstock.

Mr. Blair, keynote speaker of today's program, stressed Rotarian ideals and lauded the aims of the organization as he pleaded for business men to raise ethics through Rotary.

He described the national recovery act as a necessary expedient, but said its value as a permanent plan was "doubtful."

"We can not get rid of that rugged individualism which made this Nation great," he said.

New Governor Elected.

Yesterday's sessions featured the election of officers. The Rev. Paul D. Bowman, of Warrenton, was chosen governor of the district over the Rev. James W. Wright, of Harrisonburg, the only other candidate. He will be installed on July 1, succeeding John E. Martin, of Suffolk, who has served through the past year.

Throughout the meeting there was an earnest effort to recruit delegates for the international convention in Detroit next month. H. H. Newman, chairman of the district's "On-to-Detroit Club," described the program of that meeting and urged all Rotarians to attend if possible.

A memorial service to Rotarians of the Fifty-sixth District who died during the past year was led by the Rev. W. W. Arrowood, of Tazewell.

The session yesterday was featured by four group luncheons sponsored by the Martinsville, Wytheville, Christiansburg and Harrisonburg clubs, and a banquet and ball in honor of Gov. Martin and visiting Rotary notables and their wives.

Membership Slightly Lower.

Membership in the District showed a slight loss this year, Gov. Martin reported, but he expressed the hope that last year's record would be surpassed before the end of the present fiscal year.

Honorable mention was given Rotary clubs at Buena Vista, Leesburg, Luray, Martinsville, Waynesboro, South Hill, Tazewill, Front Royal, Wytheville, Fredericksburg and Radford for unusual attendance records established this year.

Much of the danger that threatens the peace of the world today may be traced back to the lack of clear, constructive thinking at the time that peace was made after the World War, declared Dr. Otto F. Frederikson, professor of history and social science of Harrisonburg State Teachers College, speaking at the Harrisonburg Club luncheon.

"If progress is to be made in human relations and especially in international relations, clear, constructive thinking is just as essential as in the physical and biological sciences," he declared.

Former Mayor Heads Ticket In Frederick

Frederick, Md., May 18 (Spl.).—Democrats at a largely attended convention here last night nominated candidates for the June 12 election for mayor, city register and tax collector and five members of the board of aldermen. The only contest was one for alderman, August T. Brust, incumbent and president, being defeated.

Those nominated were: for mayor, Lloyd C. Culler, former mayor; city register and tax collector, Louis E. Eichelberger; aldermen, Charles T. Butcher and Herbert S. Schroeder (incumbents), G. William Shipley (former member), Jesse W. Kolb and Robert L. Grove. James E. Solt was placed in nomination for city register and tax collector, but withdrew.

Interest centered in the aldermanic fight. The convention was controlled by friends of Gov. Ritchie, many of whom listed Brust as a friend of Dr. Charles H. Conley, who is opposing Gov. Ritchie for renomination. Brust received 37 votes against 66 for the next lowest candidate nominated. After the vote was announced, Brust moved that the nominations be made unanimous.

In an address following his nomination, Culler denounced an "unjustified increase in water rents and expenditures of approximately $52,000 taken from bond accounts of about $70,000 which I left in the treasury at the end of my last term. An increase would have been made in the tax rate had not this fund been available," he said. He added that if elected he will reduce the water rents.

Culler's address was a reply to a speech made by Mayor Munshower, recently renominated to succeed himself, who stated that the administration budget was exceeded by $16,000 during the last year Culler was mayor, and that the previous Democratic administration had approved a plan to increase water rents.

Guy. K. Motter, Sherman P. Bowers, Alfred W. Gaver, Alton Y. Bennett and W. Clinton McSherry were named the committee on resolutions, and J. Rollin Atkinson and Mrs. Francis H. Markell were convention secretaries.

Culler was nominated by McSherry, and Eichelberger was placed in nomination by Arthur H. Doll. Former State Senator Jacob Rohrback nominated Brust; Parsons Newman nominated Butcher; James H. Gambrill, jr., nominated Kolb; David C. Winebrenner 3d, secretary of the State of Maryland, nominated Schroeder; William B. Bennett nominated Grove, and Dr. Bernard O. Thomas nominated Shipley.

'Mistake,' Says French Consul, Ready for Girls' Passports

Madrid, May 18 (AP).—L'Affaire Smith College, as the French say; La Cosa Smith College, as the Spanish say—or, "How about it?" as the Smith College girls themselves said, moved toward a general victory for all concerned tonight.

The girls, who had been denied permission to visit France, received the permission, but they intimated they didn't know whether they wanted to go after all, and the French Consul, who started it all, said there was some mistake.

Such innocent bystanders as were caught in the throes of the dispute and were slightly bewildered by the whole affair, became frankly superstitious and said the real responsibility lay in the fact 13 girls were involved. Twelve of them are students of Smith College and the thirteenth comes from Barnard College of Columbia University.

They complained hotly to Curtis Jordan, United States Consul, yesterday, that the French Consul had refused to vise their passports when they asked to go to France on their way home and that he, the representative of France, had told them he wanted good conduct statements from French Consuls in the United States before he could grant his permission for them to visit La Belle Republique.

The girls have been studying at the University of Madrid. One of their subjects has been the Spanish language. Very unofficial observers pointed out the likelihood there had been some misunderstanding involving French, Spanish and English.

In any case, Manuel Neville, the French Consul in question, visited Jordan personally tonight and said he was ready to vise the passports for the girls at any time.

The girls said they were somewhat divided now on whether they wanted to go to France. They will decide soon.

More Relief Work Starts

New Projects Approved for Fredericksburg, Spotsylvania.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 18 (Spl.).—Approval in Richmond of three Fredericksburg and three Spotsylvania FERA works division projects has been announecd by W. F. Carter, jr., work engineer for the Third District of the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration.

Fifteen men have started work on the public schools project here, six on the city park project, and work will begin on the Mayfield sewer project soon. These are all unfinished CWA projects. Mr. Carter announces he expects early sanction to begin work grading, graveling, erecting curbs and installing water and sewer mains on the Gunner Springs road.

In Spotsylvania County 12 men will begin work Monday on improvement of the Fredericksburg State Teachers College grounds, and additions will be made to the jury room and the clerk's office at the courthouse. All labor remaining on county relief rolls is expected to be absorbed on the largest Spotsylvania County project of improving and repairing schools, expected to receive approval early next week.

Miss Nell Johnston, local relief director, announces that workers are paid in both money and work payment orders, which are honored at local groceries.

G. O. P. Chiefs Attend Carroll County Rally

Westminster, Md., May 18 (Spl.).—A meeting of the inner council of the Young Republicans League of Maryland held here last night developed into one of the most spirited Republican rallies ever held in Carroll County, when a number of candidates for Governor, United States Senator and county offices addressed a crowd of several hundred persons following a banquet.

The banquet, held at Gilbert's Inn, near Westminster, was attended by 40 State officers of the league, candidates and local Republican leaders. Speakers included George Henderson, of Cumberland, candidate for attorney general and president of the Young Republican League, and Col. Marion Humphreys, of Salisbury.

Walter R. Rudy, Mount Airy, central committee chairman, opened the rally with an address in which he stressed the importance of harmony, loyalty and maximum registration for success in the coming election.

J. David Baile, State Sentor from Carroll County, introduced the speakers, who included Harry W. Nice, H. Webster Smith, Baltimore, and Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, of Annapolis, candidates for Governor; Joseph I. France, Port Deposit, and Linwood L. Clark, Annapolis, candidates for United States Senator; Walter W. Dawson, Rockville, member of the House of Delegates and candidate for State's attorney of Montgomery County; Galen L. Tate, Bethesda, chairman of the State central committee of Maryland; Dr. Irvin Wertz, Mayor of Hagerstown, and Harry O. Levin, Baltimore, former Assistant United States Attorney.

Several Hurt in Bomb Blast.

Colored Communist Speaker Barred From U. of V. Hall

Charlottesville, Va., May 18 (Spl.).—Against the protest of the student Free Discussion Group the University of Virginia today barred Richard Moore, colored speaker of the International Labor Defense, from delivering an address Sunday in any university building. He was scheduled to talk Sunday in Madison Hall under auspices of the student organization.

Dean Ivey F. Lewis said his office would not grant permission for use of an auditorium in the hall, explaining "Our only reason is one of race and not of policy." In a concise statement he said Moore would not be denied right to talk on the campus because he is a Communist, but because he is colored.

Members of the Free Discussion Group, which small body created a stir on several occasions in the last two years, professed resentment and branded the prohibition "inconsistent."

"Six members of the Communist party have spoken in Madison Hall in the last two years and at no time has the question of their right to speak been disputed," said a spokesman for the group. "Moore is a Communist and it is not possible there can be protest because of his views.

"In the past the university has allowed colored persons to come here as entertainers and some even have been members of round table discussion groups at economic sessions. Officials therefore are inconsistent in their prohibitions.

"Moore's rejection is the expedient thing for the university to do. It is a denial of Jeffersonian principles and of rational consistency. It is to be regretted."

Bausell Guilty, Jury Proposes 32-Year Term

Virginia Publisher's Son Is Convicted of Slaying Father-in-Law.

Wytheville, Va., May 18 (AP).—Bernace Bausell, 28, charged with the slaying of T. Eugene Cornett, of Rural Retreat, on January 13, was today found guilty of murder in the first degree and the jury recommended he be sentenced to 32 years.

It was decided that written grounds for a defense motion to set aside the verdict as contrary to law and evidence should be submitted and that if the motion is overruled, sentence would be imposed and a suspension granted to permit appeal.

A change of venue was denied the defendant, but the court ordered all male spectators to be searched for arms before admittance to the court. The action was based on allegations contained in the change of venue petition.

A fatal exchange of shots, which resulted in the wounding of H. F. Bausell, Lebanon newspaper publisher and his son, and the death of T. Eugene Cornett and his daughter, Mrs. Virginia Cornett Bausell, wife of the defendant, took place at the Cornett home near Rural Retreat.

Lee Ridiculed On 'Retiring' From Politics

Quits 3 Jobs to Escape Blame, Says Fusion Ticket Leader.

Fear of defeat in his home county in the coming election is the reason why E. Brooke Lee, Montgomery County Democratic leader, resigned from three State jobs, it was charged yesterday by Edward Peter, a member of the executive committee of the Progressive Democratic faction in Montgomery, which, with Republicans, is opposing the regular Democratic organization.

Mr. Peter, a member of the anti-Lee group, ridiculed the idea that Mr. Lee has quit politics, even temporarily.

In resigning as a member of the State Roads Commission, the War Memorial Commisson, and as a member of the Board of Regents of the University of Maryland, Mr. Lee wrote Gov. Ritchie:

"I propose to devote 98 per cent of a ten-hour day to my real estate business and to refrain from active participation in politics."

That, said Mr. Peters, is the bunk.

"Mr. Lee sees the possibility of his group being licked by the fusion ticket which the Progressive Democrats and the Republicans are putting in the field in Montgomery County," Mr. Peter said. "He is getting in a strategic position. If the licking arrives as scheduled, he will be able to say it was because Lee was not active. If by any chance he should win, he will say, 'I did it with my bow and arrow.' Oh, there's nothing stupid about the man.

"His resignation means nothing if a politician is named to succeed him. It may mean something if a high-class man is named in his place."

Mr. Lee has for many years been a member of Gov. Ritchie's "brain trust," and has been a leader in all of the Governor's campaigns.

Reports were current here that Gov. Ritchie may name John R. Mackall, former chief engineer of the State roads commission, as successor to Mr. Lee on the commission. Mr. Mackall resigned following the State roads scandal several years ago.

Gov. Ritchie Accepts Resignation, Lauds Lee

Annapolis, Md., May 18 (Spl.).—The resignation of E. Brooke Lee from the Maryland State Roads Commission, the board of regents of the University of Maryland and the War Memorial Commission of Baltimore, has been accepted by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, who expressed regrets over Mr. Lee's decision and praised his work for the State.

Announcement of the resignation of Mr. Lee, who for years has held a large portion of the political limelight in Maryland, came within a few hours after a broadside attack from political opponents who charged he was holding up construction of the Baltimore-Philadelphia road for political reasons.

It is generally interpreted here, though, that the man who for many years headed the Democratic machine of Montgomery County resigned in order to clear the way for the election of Ritchie as fifth-term Governor of Maryland.

Mr. Lee, a real estate dealer at Silver Spring, is a son of former State Senator Blair Lee. He was appointed to the State Roads Commission April 30, 1931, to fill one of the vacancies created by Howard Bruce and John K. Shaw. During the 1933 special session of the Legislature he was considered field marshal of the Ritchie forces.

French Ship Naval Guest At Annapolis

Ambassador deLaboulay to Inspect Cruiser This Morning.

Annapolis, Md., May 18 (Spl.).—The French cruiser Jeanne D'Arc, bearing 154 midshipmen on a cruise of instruction, anchored in Chesapeake Bay, six miles east of Annapolis, early today, for four days, during which time her officers and midshipmen will be official guests of the Naval Academy, and will make trips to Washington.

As the visiting warship came to anchor in the roads, she fired the National salute of 21 guns, which was returned by the shore battery of the academy.

Two hours later Capt. Yves De Vaisseau Donval, skipper of the Jeanne D'Arc, came ashore and called officially upon Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent, and was received with customary ceremonies. With him was Capt. Louis Sable, French Naval Attache at Washington, and Lieut. P. L. Weaver, United States Navy, who has been assigned as aid and liaison officer to Capt. Donval.

He also paid his respects to Mayor Walter E. Quensteadt of Annapolis, who extended the freedom of the city. A projected visit to Gov. Albert C. Ritchie was canceled as the chief executive was absent from the city. Admiral Hart, accompanied by his aid, Lieut. Comdr. Lynde D. McCormick, returned the call later in the day.

Capt. Donval went to Washington in the afternoon, visited officials at the French Legation, laid a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and arranged for a visit of the French Ambassador, Andre de Laboulaye, to the ship tomorrow morning, after which he will be the luncheon guest of Admiral Hart, and with the French officers and middies, attend some of the collegiate athletic events in which American midshipmen will engage. The visiting group also will make a complete inspection of the Naval School tomorrow.

Capt. Donval has a staff of 30 officers, who with the midshipmen and a portion of the crew of 500 of the Jeanne D'Arc were given shore liberty this afternoon and visited points of interest in the city.

Admiral Hart will be dinner host to Capt. Donval and five of his staff tomorrow night, preceding the dance to be given by American officers, to which the visitors have been invited.

Chauffeurs Barred On Expense Tallies

This, in effect, was the ruling of Attorney General A. P. Staples in reply to a query from Comptroller Gathright, for whom such questions arise in handling expense accounts.

The attorney general held that the State would not be responsible for a chauffeur's food and lodging on a trip on State's business.

Stocks Retreat After Silver Flurry Wanes

New York, May 18 (AP).—The stock market dropped back into a rut today as a flurry of inflation sentiment on silver prospects subsided.

Unable to make any further appreciable headway after yesterday's broad recovery, the market yielded to profit-taking but volume shrank. Turnover on the stock exchange dropped to 914,390 shares compared with 1,286,540 in the preceding session.

Advance in Metals.

The sharp advance in metal shares touched off by news the Administration had approved a silver program for legislative action before Congress adjourns invited selling by traders, despite a further moderate rise in silver futures.

American Smelting and Refining, U. S. Smelting and other mining shares lost fractions to a point or so of their previous gains.

Leading industrials sagged also. U. S. Steel, American Can, General Motors, Chrysler, General Electric, National Distillers, J. I. Case, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Johns Manville slipped fractionally to a point or more lower.

Rails Average Lower.

Rails and utilities averaged a bit lower. Gains of fractions to 9 points were distributed chiefly among inactive and preferred issues, Homestake Mining scoring the extreme advance on small transfers.

In speculative markets, however, a tendency to mark time until silver inflation possibilities are clarified was evident. Most actively traded commodities reacted with stocks.

Speculative Urge Dormant.

While some of the large supply of unemployed capital flowed into the investment market, maintaining high grade bond prices near their recent tops, the speculative urge was dormant.

Seasonal falling off in production and trade became more plainly visible in trade statistics.

Weekly trade reviews lost their recent brightness. Dun & Bradstreet's summary noted signs of hesitation and a slower pace in business, although it pointed out confidence in the main upward trend was widespread and prophesied resumption of the recent advance, with more activity this summer than had been expected.

Market commentators were wary in expressing bullish views for the immediate future until convinced that the rally in prices this week proved something more than a technical recovery following the April and early May decline.

Trade Trends.

Chemicals — Factory operations, employment and wages in the American chemical industry are approaching predepression levels, says Industrial and Engineering Chemistry." The publication comments that while recovery is not yet large, "it has been well sustained over the better part of a year."

Gasoline—Trade interests hear that heavy buying has featured the midcontinent tank car gasoline market during the last few days. Prices are firmer.

Linseed Oil — Manufacturers are booking a small volume of new business, but deliveries on old contracts are fair. Trade interests look for stimulation of sales in connection with the proposed home modernization program.

Knit Goods—Trade quarter report that business in the more important lines, such as underwear, hosiery and sweaters has run considerably below that of a year ago both as to sale lots and dollar volume.

Chain Store Sales—Present indications are that the May volume gain will be considerably less than that registered in March, but in line with the average rate of increase during the first four months of the year.

Sheets and Pillow Cases — New business has been developing slowly so far this month in spite of the ability of buyers to fill requirements at the lowest prices of the year.

Robey's Review

Claim of Silver Group That We Have a Statutory Price for This Metal of $1.29 an Ounce Is Completely Without Foundation.

By Ralph West Robey.

Perhaps most contemptuous of the misrepresentations of the silver group in its attempt to get something done for this metal is the constant reference to $1.29 an ounce as the statutory price of silver. We no more have a statutory price for silver in this country than we have for nickel, copper, or the particular kind of paper out of which our currency is made. Or put it this way: If the statutory price of silver is $1.29 an ounce, the statutory price of the paper contained in our $1 bills is $53.56 an ounce and in our $10,000 bills is $535,600 an ounce. The fact that the paper in both denominations of bills is idential does not affect the accuracy of the statement.

Showing that this is true is simple. Suppose the Treasury buys, to make the calculation simple, 371,250 grains of silver. At current market prices, which is what the Treasury pays, this would cost about $350. Now assume the Treasury coins this into silver dollars. Each dollar will contain 371¼ grains. From the total purchase, therefore, the Treasury will coin $1,000. Obviously what the Treasury is doing is to issue a token coin—a coin that is stamped as having a value far above its commodity value. Specifically it is stamping 371¼ grains of silver as $1, although in the market this amount of silver is worth only about 35 cents.

Now, what the silver group does, in order to get the $1.29 price, is to say that if 371¼ grains of silver are worth a dollar, an ounce of silver must be worth $1.29. This is merely a matter of division. Since there are 480 grains in an ounce, each ounce contains enough to make 1.29 dollars.

Now suppose we aply the same logic to the paper in our currency. For this particular type of paper the cost at the mill is approximately 32 cents a pound. Out of each pound the Treasury is able to print, as nearly as I can figure it, 857 bills. This means that from each ounce of paper it buys it can print 53.56 bills. Assume these are $1 bills. Then, this ounce of paper is stamped as being worth $53.56. If they are $10,000 bills, the ounce will be stamped as worth $535,600.

In the one case, thus, the Treasury buys a commodity—silver—for 45 cents an ounce and stamps it as worth $1.29; in the other case it buys a commodity—paper—and stamps it as worth anywhere from $53.56 to $535,600, depending upon the denomination of the currency issued.

Whole Claim of Silver Group Is Unwarranted.

Such is the basis of the claim of the silver group that we have a statutory price for this metal of $1.29 an ounce. If the claim is justified, so would paper manufacturers, at least the one that produces the paper in our currency, be justified in claiming that the statutory price of their commodity is $535,600 an ounce. And if the silver group is justified in demanding that the Government pay $1.29 for their metal, so are the paper manufacturers justified in demanding that the Government pay $535,600 an ounce for their product.

"Statutory price" in connection with money means the price at which, as provided by law, the Government shall buy and sell the money commodity. It is the price at which one can convert in any amount this money commodity into coins and currency, and vice versa. For example, until March, 1933, one could take any amount of gold bullion to the Treasury and sell it at $20.67 an ounce. Conversely, he could take any amount of paper currency to the Treasury and convert it into gold at this price. That was a "statutory price." One dollar and twenty-nine cents is not, and has not been since we abandoned bimetallism in 1873, a statutory price of silver. Rather, it merely is a convenient figure for the silver group to use in trying to get a subsidy out of the Government.

Avtivity in Federals Lifts Sales Turnover to $13,877,000.

New York, May 18 (AP).—The bond market churned about indecisively today, but prices generally about held their own and a number of issues showed moderate improvement.

Due to a little more activity in the Federal section, total transfers expanded to $13,877,000, par value, against $12,208,000 in the previous session. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged at 86.1.

There was some profit taking in the more volatile bonds which yesterday jumped forward with stocks. High grade groups continued to maintain a steady to firm tone. There was little in the news to influence the list.

Inflation Revival Brief.

The revival of inflationary psychology following the Washington silver accord appeared to have been brief. There were some further recessions reported in business and car loadings recorded a contra-seasonal drop in the preceding week.

Gains were held by some liens of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Chicago Great Western, Denver & Rio Grande, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Pennsylvania, Pere Marquette, Southern Pacific, Wabash and Western Pacific.

Among the losers in this department were bonds of N. Y. Central, Missouri Pacific, Illinois Central, Great Northern, Erie, Atlantic Coast Line and Alleghany Corp. The heaviest turnover of the day was in N. Y. Central convertible 6s which eased ¼ of a point.

The firmer utilities and industrials included issues of Utilities Power & Light, United Drug, Standard Oils of New Jersey and New York, St. Joseph Lead, North American Edison, Interborough Rapid Transit, General Theaters, Consolidated Gas, American Telephone and American Sugar Refining. Bonds of International Telephone, New Orleans Public Service, Postal Telegraph and Remington Rand were under pressure.

Foreign obligations were mixed. The recent activity of Rhine-Main-Danube 7s, which rose 17 points on Wednesday, was explained by an announcement that this issue could be converted into internal bonds up to May 28. The bonds, to be exchangable, however, must be in Germany on that date. Because of the two-day delivery rule, these bonds were sold for cash today in order that they could be sent abroad within the time limit.

Curb's Prices Turn Mixed In Profit Sales

New York, May 18 (AP).—Profit-taking gave the curb list a somewhat irregular appearance today. Variations at the close, however, were mostly of fractional limits. The market was only slightly more active on the reaction.

Some firm spots remained. Oils finished rather steady. Utilities were mixed, while small recessions predominated among metals. In the specialty division Greyhound Corporation was a strong feature, advancing more than a point in a brisk turnover.

Aluminum Company of America yielded 2 points. New Jersey Zinc lost 1, while Electric Bond and Share, Hiram Walker, Newmont, Lake Shore, Swift & Co. and International Petroleum were fractionally lower.

Preferred issues of Puget Sound Power & Light were unusually firm in a light turnover. Hollinger Gold and Crown Cork improved nearly a point each. Standard Oil of Indiana, Gulf and American Gas & Electric ruled steady.

Transfers approximated 248,000 shares compared with 198,000 for the previous session.

Just as the Nation's banks are brought under Government supervision by the deposit guarantee, so the proposed housing insurance bill would tend to bring building and loan associations under even closer regulation.

The bill provides for the insurance of savings or investments in such associations. It limits these eligible to such insurance to associations in the Federal Home Loan system, which are examined by the Home Loan Bank Board. Their loans come under certain restrictions not applicable to nonmembers.

Some $8,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000 of savings, mostly of small investors, are contained in building and loan associations. About 2,400 of the existing 13,000 to 14,000 associations are already members of the Home Loan Bank system, and it is expected that passage of the guarantee would bring in thousands more.

A further incentive to membership, officials believe, would be in the insurance of loans for reconditioning of old or building of new homes. They say the restrictions on type of loans, now imposed on member banks, would eliminate much original investigation of loans that would be necessary in the case of a nonmember association.

Members of the system may borrow money from the central Home Loan Banks, in much the same manner in which commercial banks may borrow on their loans from the Federal Reserve Banks. This serves to increase the liquidity of their securities.

Another incentive is the comparatively low interest rate available to member banks, and officials are working toward further reduction.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, May 18 (AP).—The outstanding volume of bankers' acceptances on April 30 was $613,129,137 against $685,154,155 at the end of March, the American Acceptance Council reported today. The decrease of $72,025,108 for the month, making a total reduction of $157,000,000 since the end of January, was attributed by the council to "the strong influence of excess bank reserves and low money rates."

Slackening in the rate of advance in production and trade was registered in April and the first half of May, with some basic fields of activity showing declines, according to the monthly report of statisticians in industry of the National Industrial Conference Board.

Wiley Blair, jr., president of the Holly Sugar Corporation, said today that "in view of the favorable current earnings" a dividend of $1.75 will be declared on the company's preferred stock, payable August 1 to stock of record July 15. This will be the first payment on the senior stock since August, 1930. Consolidated net profit for the year ended March 31 amounted to $1,044,565 against net loss of $18,744 in the previous year.

New bond offerings this week totaled $6,175,000 compared with $4,000,000 in the like week last year.

Production of plate glass by members of the plate glass manufacturers of America for April was 8,629,381 square feet against 9,926,859 in March and 4,679,776 in April, 1933.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank's daily statement showed gold imports of $1,680,000 from Canada and $1,189,200 from England. Gold held under earmark for foreign account decreased $350,100. There were no exports.

C. E. Dawson, president of General Motors Fleet Sales Corporation, announced today that sales of cars and trucks to large fleet users in April exceeded the same month last year by 80 per cent and were the largest for any month on record except one.

The short position in all securities listed on the New York Curb Exchange on April 30 amounted to 29,551 shares against 30,332 on March 29, the exchange announced today.

Wall street heard today that a group of officers of the City Co. of New York, Inc., security affiliate of the National City Bank, of New York, are planning to establish their own investment banking company to carry on the security business of the affiliate. The latter, under the banking act of 1933, must be relinquished by the bank on or before June 16.

The American Beet Sugar Co. has notified the New York Stock Exchange that it proposes to change the par value of the stock from no par "to such stated par value per share as may be determined." The company also proposes to change its name to such style "as may be deemed advisable."

Electric power output for the week ended May 12 "indicated a resumption of its upward trend," says the current issue of Electrical World. As to the general industrial outlook, the publication says that "too many factors, political, financial and psychological, are all tending to produce better business to permit prolonged or major retrogression in trade activity at this time."

Wheat Yields Under Selling; Corn Rallies

Chicago, May 18 (AP).—Wheat suffered a decided setback in price late today as a result of increased selling, led by houses with connections East, but corn values gained.

The enlarged selling of wheat was attributed in considerable measure to notice taken that drought menace to crops Northwest had failed to attract big public buying of a sustained character.

Furthermore, reports were at hand that the Nation's 1934 wheat harvest would begin in Texas next week, with Texas promptly furnishing 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels to replenish the domestic breadstuff supply or for shipment overseas.

Wheat Closes Weak.

Wheat closed weak at the day's lowest level, 1⅞ to 2¼ cents under yesterday's finish; corn, unchanged to one-half higher; oats, one-quarter to 1 cent down, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 7 cents.

Tumbles of wheat values at the last today were in the face of authoritative reports that crop conditions throughout much of the spring wheat belt, North Dakota in particular, appeared about the least promising witnessed for many years.

Forecasts of showers tonight over the drought region Northwest, however, did a good deal to handicap friends of higher prices, and this was intensified at times by weakness of quotations at Winnipeg. Another bearish factor as to wheat was evidence that numerous Chicago holders of wheat futures were getting out of the wheat market and were simultaneously accumulating corn.

Corn Trade Broadens.

Corn trade broadened as a result of reports of pastures damaged by heat and drought. Maximum gains of 1½ cents a bushel were scored by corn, but on account of the late break in the wheat market corn prices failed to hold much of the advance.

It was trade gossip that the country supply of corn was the object of sharp competition, with truckers outbidding regular market agencies. Difficulties of the feed grain situation were also emphasized by Government action to move live stock from drought areas.

A feature in the corn market was the fact that whereas on May 1 July corn closed exactly 30 cents under July wheat, the same delivery of corn has of late been selling at 40 cents discount. Oats followed the leadership of wheat rather than of corn. Provisions were about steady, responsive to hog values.

South Africa Plans Drive in Citrus Fruits

Increased efforts to promote the sale of South African citrus fruits in foreign markets are planned for the current year, according to a report to the Commerce Department by Trade Commissioner E. B. Lawson, Johannesburg. Among the foreign markets to be exploited in addition to the English market, are Canada, the Netherlands, Belgium, France and the Scandanavian countries.

The South African Cooperative Citrus Exchange, Ltd., which now handles about 75 per cent of the union's citrus fruit exports, indicated at its recent anual conference that the record exportation of 1933 would be surpassed in 1934. Funds to encourage new markets are being provided by the exhange. A subsidy of 2 shillings a standard case was paid by the Government on citrus fruit exported in 1933, the report shows.

Exports of citrus fruits from the Union in the calendar year 1933, totaled 2,316,041 boxes, of which 2,017,315 boxes represented oranges, 259,729 grapefruit, 18,544 naartjes, and 20,443 lemons.

Russia Chartering More British Ships

The Anglo-Soviet Shipping Co., the organization which handles all the shipping business of the Russian government in England, is currently employing a greatly increased number of British ships, according to a report to the Commerce Department from its London office.

During March, the report shows, this company chartered 42 British vessels, aggregating 358,000 tons cargo, at an estimated total freight of £253,126. The figures for March, 1933, were 15 vessels of approximately 116,000 tons cargo and £87,004 estimated freight.

The recently concluded Anglo-Russian trade agreement, it is pointed out, encourages the use of British vessels for the carriage of Russian cargoes and provides that the freight paid should be included in the value of British exports to Russia in calculating the balance of trade between the two countries.

Japanese Win Field Titles in Olympics

4 Oriental Records Set in Games at Manila.

Manila, May 18 (AP).—Japan clinched the Far Eastern games track and field championship today in a round of record-breaking performances that saw four Oriental marks shattered and one equalled.

The Japanese rolled up 101 points and the Philippines' team, 57 points. China took 7 and the Dutch East Indies none.

Ko Abe, of Japan, won the shot-put with a games' record toss of 42 feet 8 3-10 inches.

Sho Murakami, Japan, ran the 110-meter high hurdles in 14.8 seconds to chalk up a record. Miguel White, of the Philippines, established a record of 53:00 for the 400-meter hurdles.

Japan also won most of the swimming honors. Two aquatic records were established today.

World Shot Mark Set by Torrance

Birmingham, Ala., May 18 (AP). Jack Torrance, 275-pound Louisiana State act, broke the world's record for the shot put here this afternoon in the preliminaries of the Southeastern Conference track meet with a throw of 53 feet 6½ inches.

The accepted world record is 53 feet ½ inch, made in 1932 by Sexton of the United States.

Equipoise to Race Chase Me Today

Noted Horses to Stage Long-Anticipated Contest at Belmont With Springsteel and Mr. Khayyam in Stellar Card.

By Orlo Robertson.

NEW YORK, May 18 (AP).—The long-anticipated clash between C. V. Whitney's Equipoise and Mrs. John R. Bosley, jr.'s unbeaten Chase Me will take place tomorrow in the Metropolitan mile at Belmont Park as the headline attraction of an all-star card on the American turf.

For Equipoise, winner of his only two starts this year, the $2,500 added race will furnish another opportunity for the great handicap star to draw nearer his goal of dethroning Sun Beau as the leading money winner of the world. "Ekky" now is in second place with $332,960, as compared to $376,744 for Sun Beau.

Noted Horses in Race.

Seven other high-class performers have been named. They include S. W. Labrot's Springsteel, second to Equipoise in the Philadelphia Handicap; Samuel Riddle's War Glory, generally recognized as the champion three-year-old last year; W. R. Coe's Ladysman, leading juvenile of 1932;; William Woodward's Faireno, ruling three-year-old two weeks ago; Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Archer and Good Advice, and Mr. Khayyam, from Mrs. James M. Austin's Catawaba Stable.

As usual, Equipoise will carry top weight, 132, 9 more than Chase Me. The remainder will receive from 12 to 26 pounds from Equipoise.

Churchill Downs will close with the renewal of $2,500 Kentucky Oaks, a test of 1⅛ miles for 3-year-old fillies. Seven have been named for the event with Charles T. Fisher's Far Star, stablemate of the speedy Mata Hari, the pre-race favorite.

Contests at Detroit.

The Fair Grounds at Detroit offers as its stellar attraction the $2,500 Wolverine Handicap with 12 fine handicap horses named to dispute the issue over 1 1-16 miles.

Norman Church's Plucky Play, stablemate of Gallant Sir, has been assigned the top weight of 119 pounds. The W. T. Waggoner Texas entry of Strideaway and Quatre Bras II appears to be the likely choice, however, under 114 and 116 pounds, respectively.

In Canada the interest will be at Woodbine in the running of the $7,500 King's Plate, a 1¼ mile race limited to 3-year-olds foaled in Canada. Fourteen have been named for the much-sought-after race.

Tigers Win Second In Row Over Yanks

Hogsett Gains Victory of 10-8 in Part of Inning.

Detroit, May 18 (AP).—Lusty clouting featured today's game between New York and Detroit, in which the Tigers made it two in a row over the Yankees by winning, 10 to 8. Detroit made 15 hits and the Yanks 13.

Detroit held the lead three times before it was able to carry off the game. The Tigers went out in front with two runs in the first inning, tied New York in the fourth, and broke a tie in the fifth.

Southpaw Elon Hogsett, who worked but two-thirds of an inning, gained credit for the victory, while Harry Smythe, who came to the rescue of Red Ruffing in the middle of the fifth, was charged with the loss.

Frey Puzzles Giants; Reds 2-1 Winners

New York, May 18 (AP).—Right-hander Benny Frey's masterful pitching today spoiled Al Smith's debut as a starting Giant pitcher. The veteran Red Bird hurler kept the eight Giants' hits well scattered, while the Reds bunched three of their five hits off Smith for both their runs to give them a 2-1 decision over the Giants.

Smith went four innings before he allowed the Reds their first hit. Adams and Blakely singled to start the sixth and Koenig laid down a perfect bunt to score Adams with the first run. Jackson's error on Bottomley's grounder filled the bases. Hafey then followed with a fly to Moore and Blakely scored what proved to be the winning run.

The lone Giant run came in the ninth on Terry's double, Ott's infield out and O'Doul's fly.

Cascarella's 5 Bases on Balls Win for White Sox.

Chicago, May 18 (AP).—Joe Cascarella issued five bases on balls in the first inning today to force three Chicago White Sox runs across the plate and give Ted Lyons just enough leeway to eke out a 5-to-4 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Jimmy Foxx, with Bob Johnson on base in the sixth inning, hit his seventh homer of the season and the first hit into the center field bleachers constructed at Comiskey Park in 1927. The distance from the plate to the bleachers is 436 feet, and the ball landed in the seventh row up.

Manager Jimmy Dykes hit his second homer of the season in the third. The Sox scored the winning run in the sixth on singles by Haas and Bonura, and a double by Simmons.

Vinson Beats Mason by 7 and 6

Host Club Player Had Beaten Nee, 5 and 4, at Chevy Chase.

By Dave Herman.

SHOOTING 12 holes in even par, and putting a high polish to his attack with birdies on the last three holes, Gene Vinson, former Mississippi amateur and open champion, routed W. Beverly Mason, jr., of the host club, 7 to 6 yesterday to win the Chevy Chase invitation golf tournament.

The Manor Club entry, who defeated his Southern friend, Hickman Green of Argyle, 1-up in a stirring morning match, and won from Leo Cullinane and Harry Pitt the previous day, reserved all of his hot scoring for the finals with Mason.

Vinson had to travel to the eighteenth green and unravel a deadly approach for his par 4 to eliminate Greene, after the little Louisiana chap made a glorious comeback after being two down at the turn.

Mason Defeats Nee.

Young Mason, reaching his first finals of any tournament in the District, was in fine fettle in his semifinals match with Maury Nee, last year's medalist, conquering the 19-year-old Columbia golfer, 5 and 4 in what was considered a mild upset. Nee found himself 5 down and hopelessly outclassed as they crossed the road, crumpling before Mason's withering fire that consisted of a blazing 33, two under par—the best first nine score of the match play rounds. Nee himself shot a creditable 38. Mason had birdies on the first, third and fifth holes, and was over par on the second.

In the afternoon, Mason seemed to lose all of his scoring punch, and took 43 strokes for the first nine to Vinson's 38. Vinson's start was not particularly impressive, as they halved the first holes in 5s, and the Southerner took the second with a 5 to Mason's 6. After the next four holes had been halved in 4s, Vinson went 2 up at the seventh, 3 up at the eighth with a par 5 to Mason's 7, and ran down a 5-footer for his par 3 and a win on the ninth to become 4 up.

Vinson Strikes Stride.

Vinson then proceeded to turn on the proverbial heat with the aid of his irons and trusty putting blade. He knocked his iron on the 148-yard tenth 6 feet from the pin and nailed his putt for a birdie deuce to Mason's 3. He laid his second about 8 feet from the pin on the tricky eleventh for another birdie to Mason's par 4, and as the crowning blow fired his approach 30 feet from the cup on the twelfth, and then caused some 200 hearts to go pitter-patter by rolling the ball into the cup with all the grace and skill of a Bobby Jones. And the battle was over.

Vinson, who also won the medal by reason of his 72, thus earned the right to have his name emblazoned on the gold plaque that includes the name of that famous golfer, Walter Travis, winner of the first tournament in 1911.

The consolation prize in the title flight went to Claude Rippy, municipal star, who defeated Leo Cullinane, unattached, 5 and 3.

Outsiders Win Races In Michigan State Fair

Detroit, May 18 (AP).—Outsiders had the better of the going in the early races on today's Michigan State Fairgrounds card, not a favorite clicking in the first four races. Ned O., an odds-on favorite in the fourth race, finished second to Toytown, which paid $15.40 on a $2 ticket. There was no outstanding purse event.

Klein's Homer First of 3 as Cubs Win

Chicago Downs Phillies, 9-5; Light Net Score on Four-Baggers.

PHILADELPHIA, May 18 (AP).—Chicago's league-leading Cubs, led by Chuck Klein, continued their home-run belting in Baker Bowl today and downed the Phillies 9 to 5, for their second straight victory over the local National Leaguers.

Three hard-hit four-baggers had a lot to do with the Cub victory. They scored eight of the nine runs of the invaders. All of their runs came in two big innings.

The first of the circuit blows came in the opening inning, propelled by the bat of the mighty Klein with two on. It was Chuck's twelfth homer of the season and his third in two days.

The Phillies were held in submission virtually throughout the game by the hurling of Guy Bush. They did threaten in the eighth session, when they tallied three runs in a burst of hitting, but Bush checked them before much damage was done.

Rookie Winford Belted As Braves Beat Cards

Boston, May 18 (AP).—After belting Jim Winford, rookie pitcher from Columbus, for 3 runs in the first two innings and ruining his major league debut, the Boston Braves today trounced the St. Louis Cardinals, 6-2, in the second game of the series.

Fred Frankhouse started for the Tribesmen and was highly effective until "Pepper" Martin's line drive struck him on the leg and forced his retirement in the seventh. Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, the Braves' latest pitching acquisition, then took a turn but was yanked in favor of Ben Cantwell in the eighth when he filled the bases with Cardinals with none out.

Horse Takes 6th in Row At Track

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 18.—Little Stokes, from the Washington stable of W. A. Smithson, continued an unblemished record of four years by winning one of the two feature races of the day by a garrison finish, in which he nosed out Pro Bono. It was his sixth straight win at this track.

Little Stokes was far behind at the three-quarters, but gradually closed up on Pro Bono, and with a great spurt in the final furlong got up to nose him out. Little Stokes was installed the favorite and paid $4.60.

The other feature race of the day was won easily by Bonsoir, from the C. G. Overcash Stable. He took the lead at the break and never was headed. He, too, was bet down to favoritism after opening at 8 to 1.

Edwards Riding Star.

Jockey Edwards' riding featured the fourth day of the meet. He was up on three winners, Nora's Grace, in the second; Bonsoir and Little Stokes.

Unlawful, which finished second here earlier in the week, won the first handily, while Dunora, which won Tuesday, came right back again today to cop the third. Unruly at the post, she was placed on the outside, but jumped on top with the break and never was headed.

The favorite, Fife, in the final, which had won two races here this week, failed to get in the money. The long-priced Time Enough, which took the lead at the three-quarters, failed to last, Rollick getting up to take the race and paid the best odds of the day. Time Enough paid more third than for place.

Champion Bat-Breaker.

Kiki Cuyler, of the Cubs, is the champion bat-breaker of the majors. Kiki breaks on an average of 50 bats a season, and that, if you ask the Cubs, runs into ready money.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

I can't help but wonder whether or not Chase Me and Equipoise will really clash tomorrow. There has been no indication that Mrs. Bosley will scratch the big son of Purchase, but I can't be blamed for wondering, especially after what happened at Pimlico the other Saturday. The handlers of Chase Me have said they wanted a match race with Equipoise, but perhaps the fact that no sensational offers have been forthcoming means that they have decided that it is high time the gelding began earning some coin. Looks like second money tomorrow. Bennings, Inc., had a fair day today. Three winners and Vicaress, 15-1, in the second hole. We're beginning to like the place.

BILL.

First race—I'm going to take an ex-Marylander in the opening sprint. I mean Khamseen. At first glance he looks as if he is over his head. However, he can turn on speed for a short route and might surprise by taking this purse. Golden Way and Sunador appear best of the others.

Second race—Old Spinach jumped pretty well for me at Pimlico, and I'm going to try to make him take this field. Frolic II and Springdale Rose are ready for the place and show awards.

Third race—Angelic and Pharahawk will battle it out for the main part of this purse, I do believe. The Runyon-owned juvenile is sharp as a tack and gets the edge. Hillise might awake to take part of the money.

Fourth race—At a longer route, Chase Me might have more of a chance with the crack Equipoise. However, at a mile I'm inclined to hop aboard the band wagon and take the Whitney color bearer. Both are in splendid form and the assignment of Mack Garner to Chase Me will add zip to the race. Springsteel gets light weight for him at 118 pounds and might split the top pair.

Fifth race—Sailor Beware was shy on racing luck in that last outing. Not too sternly opposed tomorrow, he may get home in time to collect. Ted Husing is highly regarded (I mean the horse, of course). Sunned for the show.

Sixth race—Sun Spear proved a mighty fit horse down in Maryland. Faces a field of good milers here, but appears capable of turning them back. Uncle Donald and Sainted for the other cash places.

EXHIBIT got away fast, ran into lead in first furlong, drew away in run through stretch, and won nicely in hand. GOLDEN DREAM went up rapidly, and was next best. MOISSON, on the outside in early part, closed very fast. TRACKER ran a good race, and is worth noting. He is a fine looking colt. JESSIE D. M. broke good, was hustled along in early part, but stopped to a walk at end. HERENDETH broke in the air.

JESTING, away rapidly, rushed into lead, raced all opposition into defeat, and drew away easily at end. GOD O' WAR was a keen factor from the start, and ran a good race. ROCK POINT, away poorly, worked his way up, and closed with a good burst of speed in final furlong. EUCLID, well up all the way, stopped at end. CURLETTE had no mishap.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs (main course). Purse, $1,000. The Artful. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:35. Winner, J. E. Widener's ch. f. GOLD AND BLACK	106	5	6	6	6	6	6	Coucci	15-1	6-1	5-2

SICKLE PEAR, showing excellent speed, was sent to the front with a rush, and perfectly rated along, stood long drive gamely. DUSKY PRINCESS broke fast, was kept on the inside all the way, and made a game effort. WATERWICH was hustled along, and had no mishap. BROWN WITCH was hard ridden all the way. CONTESSA ran a good race, and is worth noting. GOLD AND BLACK was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000. The Raceland. For 4-year-olds and upward. Non-winners of $2,000 in 1933-34, or $10,000 at any time; other than claiming. Start bad. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 4:05½. Winner, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's br. c. (4), by Traumerei—Gunnilda. Trained by H. McDaniel. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. OLD MASTER	105	1	4	3h	4¹	4³	5	5	O'Malley	20-1	6-1	5-2

DARK WINTER was much the best to win. He was allowed to run into a pocket around the turn, and never was able to get out until the final furlong, when BLIND BOWBOY swerved out, allowing DARK WINTER to get through. JOVIUS trailed far back to stretch, where he came wide, and finished with a rush. BLIND BOWBOY beat the gate by four lengths, set fast pace, but weakened badly at end. MOUNTAIN ELK was well ridden, but stopped fast in stretch. OLD MASTER ran a good race, and will win soon.

FIFTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs (Widener course). Purse, $800. The Dobbins. For 2-year-olds. Non-winners of $1,500 or three races since April 10. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:30½. Winner, Genesco Stable's b. or br. c. (2), by American Flag—Moonlight. Trained by W. H. Brooks. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. PATRIOTIC rushed into the lead in the first furlong, drew far away, and won unextended. VICARESS, slow to begin, made up ground fast after getting into her stride, but was no match for the winner. CANDY PRINCE ran a good race. BRIGHT BANNER broke slowly, and closed a big gap. LADY SABLE showed early speed. CHARMED EYES stopped badly after breaking fast.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming prices, $2,500 to $2,000. The Greenport. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:53. Off at 4:55. Winner, Mrs. E. L. REGO, under good ride and showing improvement, slipped through on inside, and finished fast. JACK LOW, well ridden, had no excuse. TOP HIGH came around field, and closed gamely. BANNERS FLYING ran a good race. BILLY M. had plenty of speed for six furlongs, then quit.

Belmont Event Captured by Sickle Pear

BELMONT PARK RACE TRACK, May 18 (AP).—Joseph E. Widener's 3-year-old filly, Sickle Pear, won the Artful Purse here today. Jockey Wayne Wright had the daughter of Sickle out on top for the entire six furlongs. Sickle Pear won by a length in the fast time of 1:11 4-5 for the main course.

The Whalley Stable's Dusky Princess and G. D. Widener's Waterwitch, equal choices at 5 to 2, trailed the winner. Dusky Princess had six lengths to spare for the place position. Sickle Pear paid 6 to 1.

Sickle Pear was on her toes at the start and sprinted into a daylight advantage in a jiffy, with Dusky Princess, on the inside, trying to catch her. Waterwitch raced close up for three furlongs, then fell back fast. Dusky Princess made up some ground in the stretch and forced the winner to a drive, but she could not seriously threaten.

Jockey Keester Rides 3 Winners at Aurora

Aurora, Ill., May 18 (AP).—Jockey Paul Keester, who brought in his first winner during the early part of the Aurora meeting, completed a triple today by riding Enro, owned by J. D. Mikel, to victory in the top race. Enro caught the early pacemaker, Northern Sir, in the mile and one-sixteenth feature and withstood a challenge by the favorite, Sambo Brown, runner-up.

Enro's time was 1:45 3-5. He paid $8 in the mutuels.

Feldman Tops Riding Club's Opener

Meets Von Reedon May 28; Brown Is Signed for Stadium Bout.

By Bill McCormick.

THE first trickles of a deluge of professional punching, apparently imminent when legalized larruping gets in full sway, will fall upon fight-parched Washington, May 28 and June 4—the dates selected by the Riding and Hunt Club and Joe Turner's Griffith Stadium boxing projects for their opening cards.

The Riding and Hunt Club's show for May 28, as definitely announced by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday, will be headlined by a 10-rounder between Lew Feldman and Charlie Von Reedon, and Turner's June 4 card will feature Natie Brown against some outstanding heavyweight, probably Johnny Risko, over the 10-round distance.

The Riding and Hunt feature will be supported by a 10-round semifinal, an 8-round preliminary and a 4-round opener, yet to be announced. Turner has not yet made any announcement of his supporting bouts, but the semifinal is understood to involve George Pavlick, a stablemate of Risko's, for whom some outstanding heavyweight, such as Reds Barry or Marty Gallagher, will be sought.

Victors Over Sarron.

Both of the featherweights topping the card at the Riding and Hunt Club hold decisions over Pete Sarron, generally considered the king of the local featherweight roost. Von Reedon eked out a narrow win over the Birmingham beak buster in Florida before either made his debut here and Feldman, ranked No. 2 in New York, decisioned Sarron at Madison Square Garden this month.

Brown has signed for the Griffith Stadium bout, but Promoter Turner and Matchmaker Mann are encountering some difficulty in obtaining Risko's signature on a contract. It is said the Cleveland Baker Boy first demanded a guarantee of $3,000, then dropped to $2,500, but, if he fights here at all, it is generally believed he will battle for no guarantee, only a percentage of the gate.

Club Installs Ring.

Work of whipping the Riding and Hunt Club site at Twenty-second and P streets northwest into shape to accommodate the 5,000 people expected, believed to mark it's maximum seating capacity, is progressing rapidly, with the ring already installed. Seats will be in place within the next day or two and then attention will be turned to decorating the arena in a manner fitting for the opening of legalized boxing in Washington.

Turner is having a new ring erected for Griffith Stadium and soon will place an order for new ring-lighting arrangements which will throw the direct rays of five 1,500-watt bulbs directly on the contestants.

Fredericksburg High Wins by Rally in 8th

Fredericksburg, Va., May 18 (Spl.).—Pitcher Preston and his two-run lead were blasted from the box in the eighth inning today by a concentrated display of Fredericksburg High School hitting power, which carried the Yellow Jackets through to a 5-3 victory over Washington and Lee High.

After staking the Northerners to a two-run lead in the second, Pitcher Payne, of the Jackets, settled down to keep the Generals in place, though in the end his victorious mates with nine hits had less than Washington and Lee with ten.

Middies Face W. & M. On Diamond Today

The rowing crews have completed their home campaign, while the field and track and lacrosse teams await clashes with their ancient rivals, the West Point Cadets, next Saturday, the former to take place here and the latter at the Military Academy. So from the varsity angle, outstanding events tomorrow will be baseball with William and Mary College at 2 o'clock, and rifle match with the District of Columbia National Guard, also at 2. The tennis team will entertain Penn State at 2:30.

Plebe teams will be busy in four lines. The nine will clash with the championship team of District of Columbia high schools at 5. A field and track meet is booked with Mercersburg Academy for 1:45, tennis with Forest Park High, of Baltimore, at 1:05, and lacrosse with Baltimore City College at 3.

Postoffice Is Robbed Twice in Three Weeks

Vinita, Va., May 18 (AP).—Thieves who broke into the Vinita postoffice early today got practically no cash but carried away a new book of money order blanks. It was the second time the office has been robbed in three weeks. Stores throughout the State were warned not to cash money orders from Nos. 3201 to 3400.

On September 28, 1919, the Giants triumphed over the Phils, 6 to 1, in 51 minutes—the shortest game ever played in the National League.

With Hook And Line . . .

By Jean Monk.

THE Rockpoint Hotel, where Postmaster General Burleson and many of his fishing cronies years ago made frequent trips for relaxation and a fling at the National sport, has been taken over by horseshoe-pitching "Bill" Bailey, of Washington. Fishing boats will leave from a new pier in front of the hotel.

An ominous "for sale" sign on the gate post of the hotel at Kopels Point indicates that it may not open this season.

Leonardtown is all a-buzz getting ready to handle the crowds expected June 15, 16 and 17 on the occasion of the big celebration at St. Marys City on those dates.

Ark Almost Built.

The Ark and the Dove, the two famous ships in which the Calverts brought over the first inhabitants of Maryland, are being reconstructed at young Mr. Ernest H. Harge's boat-building yards at Galesville, Md., only about 38 miles from Washington.

I saw the Ark one day last week. It is nearing completion. Boy Scouts will attend to the rigging of it, and it will set sail for St. Marys City early in June.

The Rural Home Hotel, Shady Side, just around the bend from Galesville, is the largest fisherman and tourist headquarters between Baltimore and Solomons. It is surrounded by four acres of grassy lawn and many large shode trees, accommodates 80 guests, has hot and cold runnng water and showers.

If I am a judge of service that is second to none, this is the place to eat, sleep and relax.

Capt. R. E. Lee, Shady Side, says fishermen have already called him for boats, some of them driving down and demanding boats, but he persuaded them not to waste their time so early, at least not until the fish start biting. That will be after June 1.

Last Thursday I dropped down to the Point Lookout fishing fields, turned in at Ridge, and found Mrs. Willoughby, wife of the well-known fishing captain, C. F. Willoughby, housecleaning preparatory to another big season. Last year was their best year. They have accommodations for about 20 fishermen.

Restful Spot.

The shadows of night overtaking me, I ran on down to Point Lookout, 6 miles below Ridge, intending to spend the night with my friend, Capt. I. Mishtowt, manager of the hotel, but he was in Washington. His assistant and a crew of helpers were getting things ready for the opening tomorrow.

Drove back up the road, a distance of about 4 miles, to Beals, a palatial tourist home standing three or four hundred yards from the main highway. It had been raining. The salt atmosphere was heavy and chilly, and by now it was early bedtime. There was a friendly light within. I rang the doorbell, a colored boy responded. Mrs. Beals stepped into the hall. The darkness, the cold and the rain all vanished.

She and her husband had just returned from a motor trip, and they would have me sit with them in their big, beautiful dining room, warm my body with a cup or two of steaming, mellow coffee. It was just wonderful—I mean that lovely home, that warm reception and such unexpected hospitality at the end of a long, tiresome journey that day.

A 12 by 16 foot bathroom, a bedroom three times the size of the bathroom; rain, cold without, a warm welcome, hospitality within. A wonderful bed that soon conquered me and—sleep. They have accommodations for about 20 people.

Cornfield Harbor.

Friday morning I nobnobbed with my old fishing companions at St. Jeromes Creek, the Point No Point men. Capt. Wilkinson came in from his pound nets with 60 large rockfish.

I said they would average 15 pounds apiece. One of the captains said no. I asked why, and he said "because the Government inspector is sitting right there beside you." I glanced at him and replied, "I guess you are right."

Cullisons, Smith Creek, on the Potomac, will entertain 35 fishermen this summer. This is the Cornfield Harbor section.

Thurmont Defeats Liberty High, 9 to 2

Liberty, Md., May 18 (Spl.).—Thurmont defeated Liberty in the final game of the northern division of the county high school league, 9 to 2. The title was even until the fourth inning, when a walk to Weddle and a home run by Smith put the Mountaineers ahead. Four singles accounting for three runs in the fifth clinched the game for Thurmont. Neither side made an error.

Thurmont will play the winner of the Frederick-Middletown game, southern division, for the scholastic championship of the county.

Acceptance Will Permit Portner's to Stage Bout Tuesday.

UNLESS Frankie Edgren accepts a match with Tony Galento at Portner's Tuesday, the regular weekly Alexandria boxing card will be postponed until Friday in order that Tony Cancela, Florida heavyweight, may be available to battle the Jersey City knockout king. Cancela fights Reds Barry in Florida Monday and will not be able to appear here before Friday.

All local heavyweight opposition having gracefully sidestepped offers to fight Galento, the Portner's promoters canvassed the East in an abortive effort to locate some pug intrepid enough to swap punches with the roly-poly Jersey knockerout. Frankie Simms, Eddie Simms, Arthur Huttick, Joe Sekyra and many others were offered the shot at the Jersey puncher who scored a first-round knockout over Reds Barry and rocked Natie Brown to sleep in two rounds, but none would fight him.

Edgren has not refused definitely to battle Galento and may accept in time to permit the show to go on Tuesday.

Silver Spring Drubs National Training, 18-7

Pounding three pitchers for 19 hits and 18 runs, the Silver Spring High School team won its fourth game in five starts yesterday, trouncing the National Training School 18 to 7, on the latter's diamond.

Godfrey eased along under the Takomans' attaack for his second win in two days, allowing but nine hits and fanning seven.

Freas had five hits, including two triples. "Dope" Clark clouted the longest one of the day for a prospective homer, but was called out for not touching second. Ragged play by the Trainers aided the Takomans.

The Springers were victorious yesterday over the Sherwood nine, 7 to 6, when Godfrey's fine relief pitching saved the game in the ninth. Clark grabbed the slugging honors.

Stewart Pitches Nats to Victory

spiking broke out again. Running full tilt into second in an effort to break up a possible double play, Trosky tore Bluege's shoe from his foot with his spikes. Visions of serious injury disappeared when Bluege returned to his position, but not before he struck a belligerent chin in Trosky's face and told that young man a helluva lot that was on his mind.

Back there a while ago, I said Schulte stole the show, and he did. In that seventh, Dick Porter smacked a fly ball out to the fence in right center that was ticketed for anything ranging from a double to a homer until Schulte gallivanted over there to make a sensational catch. But you ain't heard nothing yet. On the next pitch, Bill Knickerbocker hit one to the same spot, and Schulte ran right over there again to bring down with one hand while running full tilt into the wall, the ball sticking in the webbing of his glove. Thus he preserved the Nats' 2-1 lead.

They upped it to 2-1 in the ninth, when Dave Harris smacked his second double of the game and scored on Phillips' single past Kamm, and you know what happened to the Indians in their ninth.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Scotland gave the world one of its greatest philanthropists, Andrew Carnegie. In 18 years from 1901 to 1919 he gave away $350,000,000 to various funds for schools, libraries, and other institutions. His grants during that time averaged almost $20,000,000 a year. In one year alone he made bequests of $130,000,000.

Carnegie was born at Dumfermline, near Edinburgh, in 1835. While still a boy he came with his family to America, where his father was employed in a cotton mill near Pittsburgh. The son also worked in the cotton mill as a bobbin-boy. At 16 Andrew Carnegie, then a telegraph messenger boy, became the sole support of his family. His rise then through one position and another until he became a multimillionaire capitalist is well known.

In 1901, about 30 years after the formation of his first company, Carnegie retired from industrial life at the height of his career to devote himself to the task of giving his money away where it might serve humanity best.

It was his motto that "the man who dies possessed of wealth which he was free to distribute, dies disgraced." He planned himself to die a poor man. His death in 1919, however, left his estate with $22,000,000 not yet distributed—but he had already given away $350,000,000 in 18 years, and another year at that rate would have finished his fortune.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Ah Ha, Cibyl Again — By Harry J. Tuthill

HEAVENLY DAYS, GEORGE BUNGLE, SUCH A MOONY LOOK! HAVE THOSE BURGLARS BEEN PLAYING LEAP-FROG IN YOUR OFFICE AGAIN?
LISTEN JO, KINDLY DO NOT RAZZ A PERSON WHO ALREADY HAS ENOUGH ON HIS MIND FOR THREE NERVOUS TAILSPINS.
MY STARS! WHEN YOU STARTED IN THAT DETECTIVE AFFAIR YOU TALKED AS IF THE ONLY PERSONS WHO'D HAVE TO WORRY WOULD BE THOSE YOU WERE FOLLOWING.
LISTEN, WE SOLVED THE STRANGE CASE OF THE MISSING MEMORY AND THEN GOT A LEGAL PAPER ORDERING US NOT TO TALK.
TALK ABOUT WHAT?
THE FACT THAT WE MADE THIS MAJOR AMBUSH ADMIT HE PUT HIS MEMORY IN REVERSE SO HE COULD GET OUT OF MARRYING MRS. DARD.... AH...THE LADY IN THE CASE. WELL....
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
MRS. WHO? DARDANELLA? THAT WAS THE NAME YOU STARTED TO SAY AND THEN SNEAKILY CHANGED YOUR MIND, WASN'T IT?
MRS. DARDANELLA! HER! THAT WATERY-EYED VAMP! SO YOU'RE MIXED UP WITH THAT FUZZY-HEADED WOMAN AGAIN, EH?

DIXIE DUGAN — It's a Long Story — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

I BEG YOUR PARDON MISS, BUT WOULD YOU MIND IF I SPOKE TO YOU?—THESE LONG TRAIN RIDES GET SO—
EDGIE!! WHY—HOW ON—
EXCUSE ME—I'M NOT INTERESTED!—AFTER YOU DIDN'T EVEN BOTHER TO ANSWER MY NOTE—
BUT, DIXIE!—I DIDN'T GET IT UNTIL TEN MINUTES AGO!—IF YOU'LL JUST LISTEN THERE'S A LOT I CAN EXPLAIN—
YOU SEE—WHEN THAT LETTER CAME FLOSSIE WAS AT MY PLACE AND BEFORE I SAW IT SHE HID IT
OH—SO FLOSSIE WAS AT YOUR PLACE?
DIXIE—DON'T MISUNDERSTAND!—SHE CAME TO TALK ABOUT COLLABORATING ON SOME WRITING WORK WITH ME
PLEASE NOW, DIXIE—THAT WAS MY ONLY INTEREST IN FLOSSIE—I THOUGHT I COULD LEARN A LOT FROM HER THAT I COULD USE IN MY WRITING AND SO WHEN SHE OFFERED TO READ ME HER DIARY—
AN' S'POSE WHAT I SAW—YOU KISSING HER—THAT'S WHAT YOU CALL READING A DIARY?
I DIDN'T KISS HER—SHE KISSED ME—

POOR BIM IS A NERVOUS WRECK—HE HASN'T BEEN OUT OF HIS ROOM IN ALMOST TWO DAYS—HOW CAN THEY SUE A MAN FOR $10,000,000
WELL THEY DO IT, MIN—THAT'S ALL—
BUT THERE IS NO CHANCE FOR THEM TO WIN THE CASE, SURELY—BIM IS TOO SMART TO GET CAUGHT IN A TRAP LIKE THAT—HE'LL WIGGLE OUT OF IT SOME WAY—
I TELL YOU, THEY CAN TIE EVERY PENNY OF HIS UP—WITH THE CASE THEY'VE GOT AGAINST HIM—THAT LETTER HE WROTE AND ALL—HE'LL BE LUCKY TO GET OFF WITHOUT LOSING A LOT MORE THAN TEN MILLION—
BUT I'LL BET HE STILL HAS A TRICK OR TWO UP HIS SLEEVE—BIM IS AN OLD FOX YOU KNOW—AND A FOX IS CUNNING—

DICK TRACY — A Tin Gun

Samuel Pepys.

Sam's "Diary" doubtless will not cease to rank with Boswell's masterpiece. All round the world delighted men are glad to take it up again and read nine pages or fifteen of that refreshing evergreen. It introduces dukes and kings, but mostly deals with trifling things. Old Sam'l had observant eyes, and all things stirred him to surprise; a rooster fight would thus engage his trenchant pen for half a page; he chronicles his daily life, the little wrangles with his wife, and how they nearly came to blows, and how one day he pulled her nose. His neighbors do not please him much, and with a deft and skillful touch he shows them up as vulgar skates, and far from mental heavyweights. He has a servant, William J., and doesn't like his sloven way, and beats him roundly with a stick, and jars him with a good swift kick. Sometimes at eve he's feeling fine, all lit up with imported wine; next day his headache is a sight, and of that ache he's bound to write. His neighbor paints a backyard fence, which has an interest intense for Samuel, who smiles or scolds o'er everything that he beholds. And so he goes on, year by year, and chronicles small brands of beer, and makes a book that will outlast a hundred classics of the past
